MRS. DODGE IS SAVED BY COURT

COURT HOUSE, Guildhall, Vt., May 11.—Judge Hall saved Mrs. Florence M. Dodge from the possibility of hanging, if found guilty of shooting William A. Heath, when he declared at the opening of court to-day that he would instruct the jury that they must return a verdict of murder in the second degree, manslaughter or not guilty.

"Our law requires for first degree murder," said the Judge, "that the murder be by poison or lying in wait with premeditation. I can see no reason to find such a state of facts here. I shall instruct the jury to find a verdict of second degree, manslaughter or not guilty."

State's Attorney Harry B. Amey showed no mercy to Mrs. Dodge in his opening speech to the jury. He declared that she shot Heath and then tried to cover her tracks. He asserted that she wrote the anonymous letter, blaming the crime on a man.

"Mrs. Dodge shows that she is a deep-dyed villain," declared the prosecutor, "when she writes such a letter to throw the State off her track."

Defense Is Optimistic.

The outcome of the case was discussed freely in the streets of this little county seat, and it was generally guessed that the verdict would be acquittal or disagreement. The lawyers for the defence appeared very optimistic and declared that in their opinion Mrs. Dodge had made a most excellent witness for herself.

State's Attorney Amey in his address to the jury declared that Heath did not shoot himself, as the absence of powder marks showed; that Mrs. Dodge had exclusive opportunity to commit the crime and that it was done with her revolver.

"She shot Mr. Heath," said Amey," and then on the impulse of the moment tried to cover her tracks."

Mrs. Heath, the widow of the dead painter, wept as Mr. Amey proceeded but Mrs. Dodge was not affected. During the forenoon recess the accused woman chatted and laughed with her sisters and her friend, Mrs. Porter Dale.

Prisoner Seems Cheerful.

The courtroom was jammed to-day in a few minutes after the doors were opened. It was raining when Mrs. Dodge walked across from the jail to the trial room. It was apparent that the events of the last day or so have cheered her up to a great extent. It was remarked that she looked better than she has since the trial started.

At opening of court H. W. Shaylor, handwriting expert, was called to the stand. Judge Hall said:

"Mr. Shaylor, was the testimony which you gave yesterday the truth and the whole truth?"

"Yes," replied the witness.

This was because, through an oversight, Professor Shaylor had been allowed to testify without being sworn.

Attorney Blodgett then said: "We have several exhibits which we wish to put in evidence, among which are the paint can used by Heath in mixing his paints and the paint brush."

The judge told Mrs. Dodge that she might stand up, but need not take the stand. Mr. Blodgett asked her:

"Is that the tin and brush used by Heath?"

"I know it is the tin, but I am not sure

ROLLINS MURDER SOLVED

FARMINGTON, N. H., May 11.—The discovery of a human skeleton under a pile of stones five miles from here on the road to Middleton to-day has revealed a murder. According to the police the bones are those of Samuel Rollins, of this town, who disappeared from his home eleven years ago.

The police to-day declared that they were positive in their belief. They say they have the confession of a woman who, with two men, murdered Rollins and afterward hid the body.

The news of the discovery, followed by the sensational statement by the police has thrown this town and surrounding communities into intense excitement. The Rollins mystery is famous here. Every-one is familiar with the circumstances surrounding the disappearance.

Those most familiar with the circumstances believe that the police have the right theory. Many remember that on the night that Rollins disappeared sounds of a quarrel were heard from the direction of the house. There were two men and a woman in the house at the time.

Rollins was never heard of from the time he disappeared. After a time his wife married again. She is now Mrs. Pepper. It is reported that she is now dying.

The place where the skeleton of Rollins was found is a lonely part of the highway between this town and Middleton within the limits of the latter place. Men working in the vicinity discovered the bones. They were digging near the pile of stones when one of them saw a bone. The pile was hauled down and the skeleton revealed.

Word was immediately sent to the police. An investigation was started and the confession is said to have resulted. No arrests have been made as yet, but they are expected momentarily.

WHITTIMORE HAS LOW SCORE CARD

Parther W. Whittimore of the Country Club led the field this morning in the qualifying round of the annual Spring meeting of the Country Club with a round of 78. It was a six shot setter at this time, but he is apt to ge beaten on this afernoon as there were some good players out against him.

H. P. Farrington of the Woodland Golf Club was second with a card of 84, while L. S. Bigelow of the Country Club was the only other contestant to break 90 with a card of 89. McKim Hollins, captain of last year's Harvard Golf Club, required a card of 90, as good as Mayor M. F. O'Connell of Fitchburg.

O. L. Williams of the Country Club also went 90, while P. G. Stevens of the Country Club went 91.

Following are theother good scores of the morning:

PLAYER.	CLUB.	CARD
D. E. Jones	Concord	92
J. H. Chethill	Wollaston	92
A. J. Wellington	Woodland	92
L. J. Havleton	Brockton	93
J. M. Richards	Unattached	94
F. W. Pates	Country Club	94
Kennard Windsor	Country Club	95
Henry Jewett	Brae Burn	97

A lot of good players were out in the afternoon contest to try for the sixteen places to-morrow.

FRENCH AVIATOR MAKES NEW RECORD

MORMELON, France, May 11.—M. Nieuport, the French aviator, made what is recorded as a new world's record for 100 kilometres (62.1 miles). Officially timed in his Nieuport monoplane, he did 62.1 miles in 50 minutes and 4 seconds, which is slightly better than seventy-four miles an hour. The best previous record was made by Leblanc last month, who flew 100 kilometres in fifty-four miles and 55 seconds.

FARMERS PROTEST CANADIAN TREATY

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Charging that reciprocity would be discrimination of the rankest kind, a delegation of farmers from Minnesota appeared before the Senate Finance Committee to-day and recorded their protests against the enactment of the proposed pact with Canada. Speaking for the farmers Henry Feig declared that reciprocity would be free trade for the farmers and protection for the manufacturers.

TO PROBE WOOL FREIGHT RATES

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The Interstate Commerce Commission to-day ordered a general investigation into freight rates on wool, furs, hide, pelts from western to eastern points.

L STREET BATH FREE TO PEOPLE

The famous L street bath in South Boston is still free, thanks to the efforts of the AMERICAN and the protest of the people through the columns of the AMERICAN.

This announcement was made this afternoon at City Hall.

It is a victory for the people and the AMERICAN, and it is one of the quickest and most decisive victories in the interest of the people that has been won in Boston in many years.

Bathing is to be on the same basis at L street as it has been for thirty-five years in the past—that is, it is free to those who bring their bathing suits and towels with them.

The storm of protests voiced through the AMERICAN over the proposed charging for the privileges afforded at L street has caused the trustees to reverse their decision. At a protracted session of the board yesterday the matter was thoroughly discussed. No formal statement was given out after the meeting, but Chairman Richard M. Walsh said to the AMERICAN:

"We have no desire to put any policy into effect that will prove generally distasteful to the public. As far as the L street bath is concerned we never voted to charge patrons for the privileges afforded there. We did discuss such a plan, but no formal action was taken on the matter."

Protests Change Board.

Chairman Walsh then admitted that unless affirmative action was taken between now and June 15 on the matter of charging a total of eleven cents to bathers at L street, that conditions would be the same as existed last season and previous years.

The protest from hundreds of regular bathers at L street, professional men, members of the city government and thousands interested in the largest free public bath in the world, have had the effect of changing the opinions of the trustees. While they were unanimously of the opinion that the more judicious policy is the one requiring payment, nevertheless they are prepared to bow to the weight of public opinion on the question, and it can be announced that they will not take affirmative action on the proposition of charging.

Petition Is Still Open.

Meanwhile the petition seeking a public hearing on the matter for those who desire to protest against the proposed action of the bath trustees is still being circulated. Up to to-day nearly all of the "Brownies," or all-the-year-round patrons of the bath, had signed the paper. It is expected that as soon as this petition for a hearing is filed the trustees will make formal announcement that they never took positive action looking to fixing a charge for the use of the L street bath, and until such action is taken a hearing will be unnecessary.

The present stand of the trustees is a victory for the protestants against the payment policy. Immediately it was announced that an admission fee would probably be charged patrons of the L street bath during the coming season strong objection arose. The AMERICAN was urged to take up the fight of the remonstrants and the Mayor's office and the office of the bath trustees were flooded with letters condemning the new policy.

Mayor Keeps Hands Off.

Mayor Fitzgerald himself expressed an opinion that he never approved of a policy of charging an admission. He said, however, that he would not interfere in the matter, as he felt that the trustees were competent to handle the situation.

Unless further action is taken by the trustees the only charges at L street this Summer will be for trunks and towels. Five cents will be charged for the use of a pair of trunks and one cent for a towel. If one brings his own trunks he can swim for nothing, besides having the use of one of the 1,080 lockers. It was proposed to charge everybody an admission fee of five cents and this plan is what developed such strenuous opposition.

HELD IN $1,000 FOR GAS METER THEFT

In the arrest of Edward B. Dietrick, the South Boston police believe they have captured one of gang of gas meter thieves which has been operating successfully between South Boston and Dorchester recently. The prisoner was arraigned to-day before Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court and waived examination. He was held in $1,000 for the Grand Jury. He is charged with breaking and entering the home of Michael Collins, No. 26 Bellflower street, and of William Brennan, No. 28 Bellflower street.

MAYOR RAPS BOSTON'S RICH IN LYNN SPEECH

The lack of public spirit among wealthy residents of Boston, who have invested within a comparatively recent period $12,000,000 to improve the terminal facilities for the railroads running into Kansas City, when they would not invest one-twelfth of that amount to maintain a steamship line between Boston and Texas, and thus add to the development of Boston, was deplored by Mayor Fitzgerald in an address to the members of the Twentieth Century Club in Historical Hall, Lynn, last evening.

STEVENS WINS IN CHASE CASE

State Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens announced this afternoon that he had received an opinion from Attorney-General Swift upholding him in barring from his office Expert Accountant Harvey S. Chase, who was employed by Governor Foss to make an examination of several State departments.

"I have just received an opinion from the attorney general," Mr. Stevens announced at 1.15 p. m., "which clearly sustains my position in every way."

This statement concerns the controversy between the treasurer and the Foss expert over the right of the latter to make a supplementary examination of the books and papers in the office of the treasurer.

Several days ago Mr. Stevens refused Mr. Chase permission to go through the books when Mr. Chase appeared at the office and started to make an examination, in an effort to disprove certain statements the State Treasurer made at a legislative hearing.

Expert Chase had already audited the books and examined the papers and had made a report to the Governor. Stevens made no objections to the first examination. He appeared late at the hearing before the joint ways and means committee and took exception to certain parts of the report. Then Mr. Chase told the Legislature that the treasurer's statements were misleading and demanded the right to make the second investigation.

The Attorney-General says that Expert Chase not only has no right under law to make the supplementary investigation of the Treasurer's office which he now wants to make, but that he had no right under law to make the first examination which Stevens allowed him to make. Mr. Swift points out that this year's Act of the Legislature, which authorized examinations by experts, authorized the same only for the purpose of acquainting the Governor with inside facts concerning appropriations, etc., which were before him for action. On the matters which Chase investigated in the Treasurer's office the Governor had already passed, so ther was nothing to be investigated for his guidance.

WOMEN NOW BARRED FROM CAMORRA TRIAL

VITERBO, Italy, May 11.—Illness again compelled the absence of Gennaro Abatemaggio, the Camorrist betrayer, from the Assize Court to-day, and Enrico Alfano, the Camorrist head, did not get an opportunity to face his accuser. Alfano will confront the informer to-morrow if Abatemaggio's throat has recovered. The betrayer is suffering from strained vocal chords, caused by the tense effort of keeping his voice above the clamor in the court room while testifying. President Bianchi to-day ruled that no women spectators shall hereafter be admitted to the court room.

CANTON BRAKEMAN KILLED BY A TRAIN

ATTLEBORO, May 11.—J. J. Monahan of Canton, a freight brakeman, was run over and killed by his train, early to-day in the local freight yards. Monahan was standing on the platform of the freight depot and started to jump aboard a moving car. He fell between two and was instantly killed.

Members of the train crew felt the jolt as the cars passed over the body and then found the brakeman lying across the rails.

WOMAN LEPER IN SALEM ST.

An Italian woman living on Salem street, North End, has been pronounced a leper by Massachusetts General Hospital authorities and by Dr. Shea, physician for the Boston Health Board. She will be taken to the leper colony on Penikese Island on Saturday. Now she is in the pest house on Southampton street and entirely isolated fro mthe public.

The Board of Health declines to state the number of the Salem street house in which she lived. It is densely populated. It is understood and the Health Board does not wish to needlessly alarm other tenants. But they have had the house thoroughly fumigated and say there is no danger of contagion there. For the same reason of public policy the name of the woman is withheld. She is forty-three years old and married, but has no children. She came to Boston from Sicily four years ago.

Some time ago the woman became afflicted with a skin disease which was regarded as of slight consequence, but treatment failed to relieve her, and yesterday she went to the Massachusetts General Hospital for an exhaustive examination.

There are physicians there who are authorities of the highest rank on skin diseases. They pronounced the Italian woman a victim of leprosy and Dr. Shea of the health board was notified. The woman is afflicted with the dread disease in a mild form.

This is the second case of leprosy which the Massachusetts General Hospital has had to investigate within a week.

Last week Harry Sheridan, a fifteen-year-old schoolboy, was brought to Boston from Pawtucket, R. I., suffering from a skin disease which was thought to be leprosy in the city where he lives. The hospital authorities pronounced him a leper, and Governor Pothier of Rhode Island has asked Governor Foss of Massachusetts to urge that the lad be allowed to go to Penikese Island, although a resident of another State. Because this lad had leprosy one of the largest schools in Pawtucket was temporarily closed.

DAVIE TO FACE HIS CREDITORS

Robert E. Davie the broker, accused of making away with a fortune belonging to others, who was brought back to Boston after his flight to Brazil, will be taken from the Charles Street Jail to face his creditors in room 320 of the Tremont building at 10 o'clock, May 20.

The date for the hearing was set to-day by Referee Emery B. Gibbs of the Bankruptcy Court.

At the meeting of creditors they will have a chance to question Davie, and also the right to name a trustee. Davie was petitioned into involuntary bankruptcy in January. He was then a fugitive.

FACTORY INSPECTION ATTITUDE EXPLAINED

J. M. Hallowell, representing the Chamber of Commerce, was before the Committees on Public Health and Labor to-day to explain the Chamber's attitude on factory inspection. Mr. Hallowell defended the chamber against what he termed "a deliberate attempt to belittle the interests of the chamber in this matter," which he declared had been made at previous hearings before the committees.

Mrs. Nettie C. Ross of Rochester, N. H., was to-day denied a divorce from her husband, Dennis Ross of Wakefield. Her husband was also denied a decree. They were married in 1896 and separated in 1906. Mrs. Ross said her husband deserted her. Judge Fox found that the separation was by agreement. He also found that the charge of confirmed habits of drinking brought by the husband against the wife was unfounded.

MADERO ARMY ASSAILS RICH CITY OF PUEBLA

Woman Leader Spurs on Men to Battle; Federal Forces Demoralized All Over Country.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—It was announced at the Treasury Department to-day that shipments of arms, ammunition, or other war supplies to Mexico would not be intercepted by the customs officials at El Paso, Douglas or other cities or ports of entry now held by the revolutionists.

This is regarded as practically a recognition by the United States government of the belligerency of the insurgents of Northern Mexico.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., May 11.—Puebla, the capital of the State of Puebla, and a city of nearly 100,000 inhabitants, is completely invested by the rebel forces and will be able to hold out only a short time longer unless aid is received by the federal forces, according to official advices received by the government to-day.

Mexican insurrectos led by Senora Talamantes, have inflicted a crushing defeat on the federals under Colonel Chiapas near Montezuma, Sonora, according to advices received here to-day. Montezuma has been captured and the way is now open to a rebel advance on Hermosillo, ninety miles away. Colonel Chiapas is a prisoner with a large part of his forces and he probably will be executed by order of the rebels' woman chief.

She had offered a reward of $20,000 for the capture of Chiapas, by whose personal order her husband and sons had been put to death at the outbreak of the revolution. She took the field to avenge their death and success has at last crowned her efforts.

W. S. McLaughlin, just returned from a year at Esperanza on the west coast, states that 800 Yaqui Indians are out plundering the country on their own account. The destination of the federal troops under Colonel Diaz, who abandoned Agua Prieta yesterday, is unknown as yet, but they are believed to be headed for the relief of Cananea. From there they will be able to strike for Hermosillo, which is surrounded by rebels and Yaqui Indians.

The temporary state government established at Agua Prieta by the rebels is being perfected to-day under the direction of General Lomelin, the rebel commander in Sonora.

crobe.

Advices to-day say that the Mexican rebels attacked Nogales, Sonora, at dawn. Yaqui Indians are aiding the rebels.

REBELS PLANNING ATTACK ON CAPITAL; JUAREZ CAPTURED

EL PASO, May 11.—With Juarez in his hands, after the bloodless battle thus far of the Mexican revolution, General Francisco I. Madero, Jr., has made the captured city his provisional capital and is planning to march his army from there to Mexico City to attack President Diaz in the capital of the republic.

He will appeal, perhaps today, for recognition of his government by the United States.

Meantime Diaz has been planning a blow against the main body of the insurrectos which he and his advisers believe will crush the Maderistos. His agents in Havana have chartered, so it is reported here, three British freight steamers to convey federal troops, ammunition and food from towns along the Gulf coast to Vera Cruz, from which they will march against Madero.

No Looting Allowed.

All night the streets were patrolled and wandering soldiers driven back to their camps. General Orozco himself shot at two looters whom he surprised just off Commercio street, but they escaped in the darkness. All liquor found is destroyed.

The body of Colonel Tamboral, the federal garrison commander, who fell dead after being shot a dozen times, is lying in his home with a military guard, awaiting the funeral service which will be attended by Navarro and his paroled officers. Though Tamboral earned the hatred of the rebels by denouncing them as cowards, they nevertheless now grant him the honors due a brave man.

The work of caring for the wounded went on in Juarez and in El Paso to-day under the direction of the Red Cross. The latest reports from the various sections show that sixty-nine were killed and 185 wounded. Fully two-thirds of the casualties were among the federal troops, especially those working the machine guns, they being picked off by the rebel sharpshooters.

Strenuous efforts are being made by the supporters of President Diaz to secure an

PALMIST TAKEN AS A SWINDLER

On an indictment warrant charging him with the larceny of $2,000 from Mrs. Anna Hurd Taylor of the Back Bay, Professor John J. Redfern, psychic palmist, was taken into custody in New York, according to a dispatch from that city today.

Other charges involving Back Bay women who were swindled of more than $40,000 are said to be ready to be pressed when Redfern arrives here in the custody of the Boston inspector who went to New York to get him. The man arrested in New York was known there as Professor Hawley, but the police say that when they took him in they landed at the same time and in the same person Professor White, Professor Clayborn and Professor Rollie Hollis.

All these aliases, they say, were adopted by Frank S. Ryan of Syracuse, N. Y., who is thirty-three years old and was known in Boston as Redfern when he occupied offices in the Hotel Pelham, No. 88 Boylston street.

Disappeared a Year Ago.

Redfern disappeared a year ago, and although his description was sent broadcast by the Boston police, he operated successfully in New York, occupying a studio in West Forty-fourth street and advertising himself in newspapers and theatre programs as a palmist. He made spiritualism a side line, it is charged, for the purpose of inducing credulous women to invest in bogus mining stock.

He was highly successful and might still have been doing business but for the fact that one of his alleged accomplices was dissatisfied with his share of the proceeds and informed the Boston police of the professor's whereabouts.

Had Expensive Offices.

Redfern's methods had not changed. He still occupied expensive apartments in which rich Oriental furnishing lent the proper air of mystery. The prospective client was admitted to a waiting room where during the interval that must elapse before the professor should be at leisure silk-hatted "gentlemen" and beautifully gowned women would enter, ostensibly to await their turns, and discuss the remarkable accomplishments of the seer. These persons, it is alleged, were a part of the professor's establishment, and so much impressed were several society women of Boston by the clientele of the psychic, that they fell easy victims to his offers to make for them highly profitable investments with their money.

Redfern is said to be married to a woman who often posed as his secretary and to have a child, but as he alone is wanted here they were not molested. Among the persons mentioned as having parted from their money to the ingenious professor are Mrs. Margaret E. Ray of Boston and E. P. Nichols of No. 671 Allen street, Manchester, N. H. From the latter he is said to have taken $15,000 in a single mining "deal."

The professor himself always dressed in the height of fashion and frequented the best hotels. He has a ready smile, engaging manners and wears his blond hair combed back in an aesthetic pompadour. He is said to have been a guest in many exclusive homes in Boston, and in New York he was welcomed by many fashionable people.

His profits in the New York studio he has maintained since he vanished from this city are estimated at about $200,000. From one woman who came from Philadelphia to consult him, the police say, he got $55,000.

DANBURY, Ct., May 11.—John Axford, wanted here and in Bridgeport for passing alleged fraudulent checks, was arrested while on his way to Brewster, N. Y., to-day and held under $500 bonds. Axford, the police say, has figured in a number of check deals.

Would Tax Exported Paintings.

LONDON—Sir Edgar Vincent advocates an export tax on old masters. He says the pictures leaving this country for America in an ordinary year are worth between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000, so that a 10 per cent. duty would yield $500,000 to $1,000,000.

German Officer Slain in Duel.

BERLIN—A fatal duel between officers was fought in a forest near Berlin. Baron Oswald von Richthofen, son of the late Secretary of Foreign Affairs and a reserve officer in one of the guard regiments, killed Wilhelm von Gaffron, a retired officer.

LEGION ESCORT FOR HIGGINSON

The funeral services for Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the famous author, essayist and speaker, who died at his home in Cambridge Tuesday, will be held in the First Parish (Unitarian) Church in Harvard Square at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. The arrangements were announced to-day. In accordance with the wish of Colonel Higginson, the services will be very simple. The church from which they are held is the one which he attended from boyhood.

Rev. Dr. Samuel McChord Crothers, pastor of the church, will conduct the services, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Edmund H. Hall, a retired pastor of the same church. There will be no eulogy. A few of Colonel Higginson's favorite hymns will be sung by the Adelphi male quartet.

Loyal Legion as Escort.

The body will be escorted from the house to the church by the Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson Post, Sons of Veterans. At the church it will be met by the Loyal Legion. This body will escort the remains part way to Mt. Auburn after the services. At a given point the Sons of Veterans will again take their places as escorts. In addition to the regular escort it is expected that many Grand Army men will march with the funeral procession. Colonel Higginson expressed the wish before he died that if any of his friends, black or white or of any denomination wished to march with the procession, they should be allowed to do so.

The active pallbearers will be six negro soldiers from the Shaw Guard of the 6th Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. The six men have not been chosen as yet.

The honorary pallbearers are to be President-emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard College, President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, former Governor John D. Long, Colonel N. P. Hallowell of West Medford, Rev. Dr. Edward Cummings, George H. Mifflin of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., who were Colonel Higginson's publishers; Charles Francis Adams, Sr., and Dr. Edward Emerson of Concord, son of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Burial at Mt. Auburn.

Booker T. Washington has been asked to act as honorary pallbearer, but his acceptance has not yet been received. William Dean Howells, the author, was also asked, as was John T. Trowbridge. Mr. Howells is too ill, and the aged Arlington author is too feeble.

The services at the grave in Mt. Auburn will be private. The body will be cremated. This in accordance with the wish of Colonel Higginson.

No More FalseTeeth

Dr. Estabrooks can, at popular prices, replace the lost teeth by the use of his well-known Alveolar system of dentistry without the use of an old-style plate or old-style crowns or bridges. Don't let any dentist extract your teeth or make you a set of false teeth—see Dr. Estabrooks first.

If you have no solid teeth or roots left, the Anchor Denture Plate is the best for you. Unlike the ordinary set of teeth, Dr. Estabrooks' Anchor Denture Plate is roofless. This construction allows you to talk and taste perfectly. It is cool, comfortable, clean and fits better. It never drops, shifts or displaces, to cause wearer embarrassment.

SALEM SPRING ENDS DROUGHT

City laborers in Salem to-day discovered a spring while digging at Mill and Endicott streets. The water flowed faster than ordinary pumps could take care of it. Measurements were taken and it was found that the water was issuing at the rate of a million gallons a day. A temporary reservoir is to be constructed and the water used for street watering.

The discovery of the spring solves the problem of a water famine. Salem's supply has been short for weeks. Wenham lake, from which it comes, is the lowest in years.

Friday Three-Hour Sales

"IT IS NOT ALWAYS MAY" sang the poet. It is certainly much to be regretted that the most beautiful month that blesses our climate, passes so quickly. But if we do not keep the most beautiful things of life very long, there are many good things that stay with us. As old friends are best, so things with which we are familiar are most cherished. The Three-Hour Sales have been with the Boston public for nearly ten years, and the longer they stay the more they are liked. Study these bulletins weekly and you will find the reason.

WOMAN LEADS THE MEXICAN REBELS AND CAPTURES A TOWN

Senora Talamantes Takes Colonel Who Executed Husband and Sons and Will Put Him to Death.

other armistice and reopen negotiations. Judge Carbajal, the federal commissioner, is still in El Paso awaiting the outcome of representations being made to Madero that he can now well afford to reopen negotiations looking to the retirement of Diaz. The provisional chief has little faith in the possibility of Diaz yielding.

Besides setting up his capital here, General Madero has also established a municipal government. The actual conduct of the city was turned over to this government to-day with the military commanders keeping a watchful eye over all. A police force is now on duty, the patrolmen carrying high-power rifles.

Prisoners Burying Dead.

The former defenders who refused to list with Madero have been put to work igging trenches for the burial of the dead carrying stretchers through the streets aring the wounded.

Business has not been resumed and probly will not be, except in the gambling uses, if they are allowed to operate, til there is some change in the situan. With the Custom House closed bese of the United States' refusal to recgize the belligerency of the rebel army, rekeepers cannot get supplies from El so. With the railroads cut and the erals marching from the south, the els cannot get supplies from that quar. The insurrecto army must eat and dero is confiscating the supplies now on d.

erchants are not going to order any supplies to meet a similar fate, and result is that only the curio dealers, with stocks depleted, are able to do business. The prospects are that commercial Juarez will continue to be dead, but as an attraction for tourists it will be a "Mecca" for months. Already wires are pouring in from nearby towns from people wishing to visit the place. The electric wires have not yet been restrung, but the officials of the street car company expect to complete this work to-day and then get permission to reopen their lines and haul El Paso people back and forth. The United States has the last say, however, and the American border guard is still very particular about who passes to and from the captured city.

Juarez barracks and General Navarro, the captive federal leader. It was around the building shown in the picture that the Mexican federals in the captured city made their last stand.

Naval Battle Perhaps.

Diaz, it is reported, plans to concentrate a sufficient force at Vera Cruz to crush the rebels. By moving the army by water he will get it to the front quicker than by land route from the capital.

Madero's agents here say their chief will welcome this plan of Diaz, not only because it will remove the pick of the government forces from his land path to the capital, but because he has a gunboat in Gulf waters, and this craft, which is commanded by a former Spanish naval officer, will easily capture the transports. The gunboat was formerly in the Galveston-Havana cattle trade, but has been secretly refitted for war.

The capture of Jaures may change Diaz's plans for a naval expedition. With Madero determined to attack the capital, and insure the success of the revolution by a bold stroke, it is not believed here that Diaz will leave the way to Mexico City practically unguarded.

Madero is taking steps to-day to fully establish his provisional government. Juarez is under martial law and rigidly policed. Civil officers will be appointed to-day. Dead and wounded are being removed from the streets. Guards are posted over wrecked stores and business places and plans are being made to remove the traces of combat from the city.

Navarro on Parole.

General Navarro and his officers have been paroled and many of the federal prisoners have joined the insurrectos.

Juarez surrendered most picturesquely after the bloodiest battle of the revolution, and is to-day the provisional capital of Mexico.

Francisco I. Madero, Jr., provisional president, was the last insurrecto to enter. He rode into the city in an automobile decorated with the tri-colors of the revolutionary flag, and forthwith established himself in the City Hall. The federals are not greatly cast down. On the contrary they appear to relish their defeat and have become the loudest shouters of that rebel cry "Viva Madero."

The capitulation of Juarez gives to the rebels complete control of the border. From this time forward a far more ambitious military program will be carried out.

The advance on Mexico City is no longer the dream of the visionary, but is now a real menace to the government of Diaz.

The capture of Juarez is not only the brightest victory of the insurrectos after the greatest battle of the rebellion, but in addition gives to the anti-government forces the most important strategic point and most important custom house on the border.

The insurrectos captured large stores of provisions, field and machine guns, rifles and ammunition. Rebel soldiers could be seen everywhere loaded down with the arms of the vanquished.

Among the rebels are about 200 Americans, and, needless to say, these fought most bravely. They discouraged long-range fighting. In the various charges under which Juarez was forced to surrender, the federals fought from behind walls. The The Americans and insurrectos, utterly disregarding the disadvantage at which they were placed, ran from the trenches into and straight up the streets toward the protected positions and took them by assault.

Robago May Attack City.

News of the victory was first heralded by the ringing of the cathedral bells. It was in this manner that the residents of El Paso got their first news that the battle of Juarez was over.

The next number of the program it is believed will be an attack on the city by the federal General Robago, who is somewhere to the South, and presumably traveling this way. Among those killed in the federal barracks was Colonel Tamborel, who a few days ago taunted the rebels as cowards.

On the American side of the line five have been killed and seventeen wounded, many of them being innocently engaged at a distance from the river front.

General Navarro and his twenty-seven officers have been paroled by General Madero. After inviting them to dinner he announced that if they would promise on their honor not to leave the city they could have the liberty of the town. They agreed to do so, and slept at their own headquarters.

When the final attack began, the rebels had everything in Juares but the Cuartel or jail, the City Hall, various other buildings of military advantage near the municipal centre, and the great cathedral of Our Lady of Guadaloupe.

It was around this noble structure that the battle was fiercest. There the federals held their ground, unmoved for three hours, while the battle moved in smaller and still smaller circles upon them.

At noon the federals, with a last defiant volley, evacuated the cathedral and rushed to the Cuartel, thick walled quadrangle where they were massed under the personal command of General Navarro.

Navarro Yields Sword.

By 1 in the afternoon most of the rebels had concentrated their attack on the Cuartel and for twenty-five minutes a fierce rifle and cannon fire was directed against that building. It did not take long for this onslaught to bring conviction of defeat to the federals.

General Navarro, after a brief consultation with his staff, gave the word to run up the white flag.

General Benjamin Viljoen, military advisor to Madero, reached Navarro first. The federals' commander, who had been somewhat contemptuous of the insurrectos, yielded his sword with avidity, notwithstanding his announcement of the day before that he would die rather than surrender. It was accepted by General Viljoen and passed to Colonel Garibaldi, the actual commander of the successful assault.

When seen half an hour later by the AMERICAN staff correspondent, General Navarro was unperturbed.

"I do not know how many dead or wounded there are," he said.

"Why did you surrender?" he was asked.

He shrugged his shoulders as though to say, "What else could I do?" Then he lapsed into silence.

Half an hour after the city had passed into the hands of the rebels the exultation had sufficiently spent itself for some one to think of asking, "Where is Madero?"

He was then at his camp near the Rio Grande, about three miles away, not knowing whether Juarez had fallen or not. An automobile was decked out with the red, white and green of Mexico and sent post haste for the army's chief.

Madero arrived smiling and dapper in a khaki uniform and gray helmet. He acted almost shy and somewhat nervous as he bowed recognition to the shouts of "Viva Madero," but after havnig been installed in the City Hall his ease of bearing returned and he heard with pleasure and words of approval the comments of officers and soldiers on the valorous doings of his army.

Were Deaf—Now Hear

Remarkable Experience of Those Dead to the World of Sound With a New Treatment for Deafness That Is Wonderfully Efficient. A Multitude of Witnesses.

RINGING NOISES-----DEAFNESS

Miss Frances Bernard, who resides at No. 30 St. Cecilia St., Boston, says: "Two years ago a heavy cold caused a eustachian catarrh that resulted in almost total deafness in my right ear. Ringing, buzzing noises annoyed me greatly. I had been treated by a number of ear specialists without deriving any benefit from their treatment, when I read of the marvellous cures performed by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians with their new treatment for deafness, and I had them treat me. And as a result the ringing, buzzing noises are gone from my ears, and I hear perfectly again in my right ear, which I thought was lost to me forever."

DEAF SINCE 1865-- -HEARS

Mr. Jacob B. Sulham, who resides at So. Hanson, Mass., says: "I had been deaf in my left ear since 1865, in my right ear for the past four years. I could not hear the ratchet sound in the clock while I was winding it. I could not hear conversation and was almost totally deaf and growing deafer daily. I read of the marvellous cures of deafness performed by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians and had them treat me. Now I can hear a clock tick fifteen feet from me. I will be glad to tell any one what the Osmo-Chemic Physicians did for me."

LAST DAYS---ONE MONTH FREE

The Osmo-Chemic Physicians, the great scientists, in order to demonstrate their skill in the cure of Deafness by the New Discovery, will give all patients who are deaf, who begin or renew treatment on or before MAY 13th, one month's treatment, including all medicine, ABSOLUTELY FREE. This liberal offer will bring the cost of a course of treatment sufficient to cure the most obstinate Deafness within the reach of all. Anyone suffering from Deafness can avail themselves of this liberal offer. It is limited only as to time. It is clear that such an offer cannot be continued indefinitely. Only 2 days remain.

WERE DEAF----NOW HEAR

Miss Nellie M. Brown, who resides at 33 Aberdeen ave., Cambridge, says: "I was very deaf. I could not hear ordinary conversation. I was treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians for two months, and I can hear again as well as I ever did."

Miss Nellie Donovan, 18 High St., Beverly: "I was so deaf that I could not understand ordinary conversation. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me, my hearing has returned."

Mrs. Margaret Kimball, 121 Oliver St., Linden: "I could not hear a sound with my left ear. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear a watch tick."

Mrs. Fannie Record, 15 Vancouver St., Boston: "I was practically stone deaf. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear and understand a lecture."

Mrs. C. S. Barker, 236 Spring St., Medford, Mass.: "I was practically stone deaf. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I hear perfectly again."

TOTALLY DEAF, NOW HEARS

Mr. F. E. Bacon, who resides at No. 4 Rock st., Roxbury, says: "I had been totally deaf in my right ear, so deaf that I could not hear any sound with it. My deafness had been growing worse for eight years. I read of the many wonderful cures the Osmo-Chemic Physicians were performing with their new cure for deafness and I had them treat me, and as a result I hear perfectly in my right ear again."

POSTMASTER HANGS SELF

Charles J. Wood, for the past twelve years postmaster of Natick and a Civil War veteran, committed suicide by hanging himself to a beam in the shed of his home on High street, Natick, early today. His body was found by his wife shortly after 5 o'clock. It is believed that a stomach trouble that has caused him much pain in the past ten days caused him to become temporarily insane.

Postmaster Wood was seventy-one years old. He was a prominent worker for the Republican party. He was made postmaster through the efforts of Congressman Tirrell.

For several months Mr. Wood complained of illness. He had medical care, but the trouble got worse, and during the past ten days residents of the town have noticed that he seemed to be failing. He seemed discouraged, though had never talked of suicide.

All day yesterday he worked at the postoffice as usual. He retired about 9 o'clock, and it is believed arose about 1 o'clock. For a long time it has been his habit to arise about 1 o'clock in the morning, go down stairs to the sitting room and there read until Mrs. Wood arose at 5 o'clock.

Mrs. Wood went downstairs as usual, expecting to find him reading. She looked all over the house for him, then went out to the shed, where she found his body cold in death, hanging from a beam.

Mr. Wood was commander of Post 63, G. A. R., of Natick, and a member of the Royal Arcanum.

The funeral will be held at the High street home on Saturday. He leaves besides the widow one son, Arthur, head clerk in the postoffice.

BURLEIGH FUNERAL.

The funeral of Orlando H. Burleigh, who died yesterday at his home on West Temple street, Natick, at the age of sixty-two, from apoplexy, will be held from his home on Saturday. For many years Mr. Burleigh was one of the leading real estate and insurance brokers in Boston, with an office on Kilby street. He leaves a widow, two daughters and a son.

READ THESE They Are Birds!

BIRD HAS WINSTEDITIS.

WINSTED, Ct., May 11.—Did you lose anything in the Berkshire Hills last Summer? In the nest of an osprey on East Mountain, near Lee, boys have found more than twenty pieces of metal, including a bear trap, a chatelaine bag, a chain of beads, a small brown Teddy bear, a tin cup, the skeleton of a small animal with a string and three bells about its neck, and a palm leaf fan. "Ted" Tyes has the articles.

ROBIN SINGS FOR DOCTOR.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., May 11.—A grateful robin awakens George Washington Da Cunha every morning by singing his praises at his bedroom window. The redbreast migrated last Autumn, but Da Cunha recognized it instantly when it reappeared recently. For one of the bird's legs is shorter than the other, and the robin lists to starboard when it hops. When the robin's leg was broken last Summer, Da Cunha took in the bird, put the fractured leg in tiny splints and tended his patient until the delicate bones set, though imperfectly. Now the robin, with swelling throat, gladly pours forth a fee in daily instalments.

ROUND EGGS BY SQUARE HEN.

JOHNSTON, R. I., May 11.—There is at least one hen in Rhode Island which is unconventional. She has so far overstepped the bounds of conventionality as to lay a round egg, although she's a square little hen. And the poultry yard is the property of ment, she laid eleven more, just as round as the first. This wonder of then, apparently proud of her achieve-Walter L. Everett of Hartford avenue. About the only reason so far suggested for the stunt performed by Mr. Everett's Rhode Island Red is that she is looking for a chance to enter the next exhibition of the Rhode Island Poultry Society.

TAFT HANDS BOSTON GIRLS CARNATIONS

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Representative Murray of Massachusetts, introduced the Misses Katherine and Marguerite Collins and Miss Mary Fay of Boston, to the President. The Executive received the visitors most cordially, and after complimenting them offered each a carnation from the bouquet on his desk. These flowers came direct from the White House gardens.

NO SETTLEMENT IN R. R. BATTLE

There seems little hope for a peaceful settlement of the New Haven-Grand Trunk trouble in Vermont. The conference at which everything was to have been arranged took place to-day, nothing was agreed upon and the officials adjourned without setting a day for another meeting.

The conference, held at the North Station, broke up in half an hour. Mr. Mellen stated through his press department:

"The gentlemen present wished more time to consider the various suggestions that were made and it was agreed to hold another conference, but the date for the conference was not set."

Railroad chiefs came from all parts of New England to be present. The Grand Trunk was represented by First Vice President Earl Fitzhugh, the Central Vermont by General Manager E. C. Jones, and A. C. Watters, Grand Trunk attorneys, and H. G. Kelly, chief engineer of the Grand Trunk, were also present.

President Mellen and Vice President Byrnes of the New Haven, George T. Jarvis of the Rutland railroad and E. W. Lawrence, attorney for the New Haven, were present, while the Boston & Maine was represented by an official and an attorney.

The conference was said to have been heated and in contrast to that of last Friday when Governor Mead of Vermont was present and everything was peaceful.

None of the propositions made by the rival systems appealed to their opponents.

Vice-President Fitzhugh made the following statement after the conference:

"I had a meeting with Mr. Mellen today and some progress was made. Suggestions were made by both parties which require investigation. Another meeting will be held at an early date for a further discussion of the matters under consideration."

GIRL TELLS OF 3D RAIL PERIL

Marjorie Williams of No. 116 Winthrop road, Brookline, to-day told a jury in the Superior Civil Court how she was pushed into the pit at the Dudley street terminal of the Boston Elevated and how her life was doubly threatened by the deadly third rail and by an Elevated train rushing down upon her.

Her ankle was broken when she was pushed into the pit. Her back was strained too. In this condition, she told the jury, she dragged herself along the concrete bottom of the pit and out upon the sleepers of the Elevated structure beyond the station itself.

Miss Williams is suing the Elevated road for $10,000 for injuries received at the time, alleging that the company or its agents were negligent.

Superintendent Kimball of the Elevated in testifying in the suit declared that it would not be feasible to place a fence at the edges of the pit as is done in New York. He said that such a fence would inconvenience motormen in stopping their trains at the right spot and would therefore tend to delay traffic.

"While waiting there for the train," Miss Williams testified, "I was pushed by the crowd into the train pit. When I saw a train coming toward me, I thought my life would be crushed out. Although my ankle hurt terribly, I dragged myself toward the outlet of the station. The train kept coming toward me and it stopped only a short distance away from me. I suffered terribly and shortly after I had an operation for appendicitis, which was caused by the shock."

MAN STRANGLED BY HIS NECKTIE

With his head bent forward and his necktie knotted tightly about his neck, a well dressed young man was found dead early to-day on the steps leading to the basement of No. 26 Seneca street, South End. His feet were planted against a locked door at the bottom of the flight, while the back of his head rested on the top step.

The manner in which the young man met his death is not positively known, but from the position in which his body was found it is believed he was strangled to death by his necktie, following an attack of heart disease. The dead man is not known in the neighborhood where he was found, and there was nothing upon his person by which he could be identified. Medical Examiner Leary was notified and the body was removed to the City Hospital morgue.

Shaer ran back and notified Thormer. The later hurried to the spot. The dead man's collar had been partly torn away from his throat and his tie was bound tight about his neck with the knot dropping over on his shoulder. Thormer loosened the tie and attemtped to arouse the man. His efforts proved futile and he called a doctor, but the man was dead.

Persons living in the house were questioned, but nobody could be found who knew the dead man or could say how he came to be there, nor could anyone in the neighborhood. The police think he was walking on the street when he was seized with an attack of heart trouble, and, sitting upon the steps to rest, slipped to the bottom, the tie tightening as he fell. The collar, they theorize, was torn in an effort to loosen the choking band.

The body is that of a man about thirty years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, and weighing about 150 pounds. He wore a black serge or cheviot suit of good material, black low cut shoes and black stockings.

THREE-QUARTER POUND POMERANIAN HERE

The tiniest dog that was ever seen in Boston arrived here yesterday on the Saguore. It is a Pomeranian poodle, about six inches long and weighs only three-quarters of a pound. He and another like him would just about fill a man's coat pocket. The little fellow was brought over by Thomas Scholes of Hartford, Ct., who also had with him six other blooded dogs. All but two are Pomeranians.

General T. L. James and His Bride

GEN. JAMES, 80, HAS 4TH BRIDE

NEW YORK, May 11.—"I don't see why a man of eighty should be too old to marry. Certainly I am not—for I am married." And General Thomas L. James, former Postmaster General of the United States, and for years president of the Lincoln National Bank, assisted his bride of thirty-five on a train bound for Atlantic City, swung aboard himself and started on his fourth honeymoon.

The marriage of General James and Mrs. Florence Gaffney, whose first husband, James Augustine Gaffney of Rochester, was divorced by her, took place in the parlor of the home of Recorder R. S. Maughan in Tenafly, N. J.

General James's first wife was Miss Emily Ida Freedburn, a niece of Thurlow Weed. After her death he married her sister, Miss Jennie Freedburn. Following her death of pneumonia he married Miss Louisa Cobourne, who died in November of pneumonia, following an operation for appendicitis. All four of General James's wives came from Utica. Mrs. Florence James is a descendant of President John Adams, through her maternal grandfather, Alexander B. Johnson.

Trouble arose between the present Mrs. James and her first husband in 1900. Gaffney was left a legacy from his uncle, Charles Burke of Rochester, and later inherited a comfortable sum from his sister, Miss Emily Gaffney. His wife sued for part of this inheritance.

$2,500 BLAZE IN BRIGHTON HOTEL

The Brighton Hotel at Washington and Winship streets, Brighton, was damaged by fire to the extent of $2,500 late last night. The prompt use of hand extinguishers by the owner of the hotel, James M. Fitzgerald, Arthur McMullen, the manager, and Daniel Sullivan, held the flames in check until the arrival of the firemen. The cause is unknown. Mr. Fitzgerald's private apartments on the second floor were burned and among his losses was a hand-painted china set valued at $500. The guests had all left the hotel.

MISS O'REILLY IS TO RESIGN

Mary Boyle O'Reilly, daughter of John Boyle O'Reilly, and famous as a settlement worker, will resign from the board of trustees of the Children's Institution Department as a result of friction which has arisen among the trustees.

Miss O'Reilly has been a member of the board since 1905. The trouble which will culminate in her resignation was brought to a climax at yesterday's meeting of the board. When an attempt was made to elect a chairman of the board and a secretary to fill the positions now held by Dr. Charles P. Putnam and Miss O'Reilly, respectively, there was an exchange of personalities.

Dr. Putnam was not reappointed when his term expired on May 1. He has been holding over until his successor has been appointed by the Mayor and confirmed. Certain members of the board sustain the Mayor in not reappointing Dr. Putnam, but others object to the rebuke and oppose the attitude of the Mayor.

After a lively debate action on the election of a chairman and secretary was postponed. It was during the course of the debate that Miss O'Reilly informed the other trustees that she no longer desired to serve on the board. She wanted Dr. Putnam re-elected chairman until his successor was named, but none of the other members would second her motion.

All has not been harmony with the children's institution trustees for some time. Recently the Mayor took them to task for conducting an investigation of the parental school without keeping him in touch with the situation.

The members of the board who sustain the Mayor are James P. Cleary, John O'Hare, John F. Cronin and Louis A. Ginsburg. It is said that Mr. O'Hare is the Mayor's choice for chairman.

Mary A. Atherton, another of the trustees whose term expired on May 1, has not been reappointed. The Mayor named Gaspare DiCola for the place of Dr. Putnam, but the Civil Service Commission turned him down. Since this rejection the Mayor has made no further nomination.

JIM DOYLE'S BALL TO-NIGHT

Senator James H. Doyle and his fellow-members of the Concord Club will welcome Republican politicians, Democratic politicians, Socialist politicians—in fact, every brand of statesman that is known on Beacon Hill—to-night, when the annual ball of the Ward 12 organization is held in Howe Hall.

President Treadway of the Senate will surely be there, so will Speaker Joseph Walker, Norman White has accepted an invitation, and enough plain members of the Legislature will be present to call a special session of the House, if necessary.

Mayor Fitzgerald will lead the delegation of City Hall regulars who will attend. He said to-day that his voice was in good trim. Nuf ced.

Michael Crowley will be floor marshal and direct the corps of aids who will see that the fair visitors enjoy themselves. Senator Jim himself will be floor director, and Joseph E. Cahill will be the chairman of the reception committee.

Ward 17 will be well represented. 'Tis said that the honorable Senator from the Fourth Suffolk may drop a hint as to whom he desires to wear his Beacon Hill toga after he retires this year. At any rate, Tim Connolly and other prominent antis and regulars from Ward 17 have decided to be present.

If Governor Foss can arrange his social program, he will drop in for a few moments just to see how things are going, and to make it a real State House tribute to a popular member of the Senate.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

IVERNIA BRINGS 1500 TO BOSTON

Percy Cooper of No. 22 Warren street, Lynn, an expert strained glass worker employed in Boston, went to meet the Ivernia when she docked to-day, with joy in his heart. After he left Nottingham, a year ago, he learned that he had a son and since that time letters from his wife had chronicled fondly every action of the baby, named for him, John Percival. To-day Cooper's wife met him weeping. There was no baby. It was buried at sea yesterday.

Passengers who had come down in the second cabin with Mrs. Cooper drew apart as she told Cooper of the little tragedy that had only a brief line in the ship's log and sadly the couple made their way from the pier, the man tenderly supporting the mother who was almost on the point of collapse.

The Ivernia carried 1,500 pasengers from Liverpool. Four hundred and ninety-one of them were immigrants. The officials said it was the best list brought to this port for many years. There were 1,401 in the second cabin and the steerage who came from English-speaking countries, 358 were Scandinavians and there were only 104 from the remaining eight races that were represented.

Among the saloon passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Alanson Bigelow, Jr., Mrs. Ogdon Codman and her sons, Thomas N. and Hugh, and her daughters, Alice N. and Dorothy; and Mr. and Mrs. John S. Curtis of Beverly, who were met at quarantine by Colonel George H. Doty, sub treasurer here, and Mrs. Heaton, Mrs. Curtis's daughter.

A pair who attracted much interest on the way over were Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Moffitt of Attleboro, who were returning from a ten-month honeymoon in Europe, Asia Minor and North Africa.

Mrs. Gerald W. Hart of Hartford, Ct., brought with her Little Merrigold, a blue Yorkshire terrier that took all the blue ribbons for his class in the recent dog show at Crystal Palace.

RESUME HEARING ON SMALL LOANS

The Committee on Banks and Banking resumed its hearing to-day under the order instructing the committee to investigate the small loan business, the first hearing having been given last Monday.

Attorney H. L. R. Brown for the Chamber of Commerce said that on account of a conversation he had with House Chairman Cavanagh of the committee he would limit the number of witnesses. He said he expected to investigate the case of the employe of S. S. Pierce who hanged himself because of financial difficulties with money lenders and would later report the result to the committee.

Alfred J. Hayman, a druggist in Brookline, said that on February 7 a letter carrier whom he knew came to him to borrow $7.50. As the letter carrier had borrowed the same sum on previous occasions he asked him the reason. The carrier, who was in bad physical condition, told him he was in the hands of the money lenders. The carrier said that six months previously he had borrowed $150 from a loan company. He gave a note for $157.50, of which $5 was for making out the papers and $2.50 for registering the loan. The note called for 5 per cent. a month. In a little over six months he had paid between $93 and $95 in interest and for making out new notes. Nothing had been charged off on the principal.

Witness told the carrier he would take up the loan for him. Next morning he went to the company and offered them $155. They insisted he must pay $7.50 for a month's interest, though the interest had been paid the previous afternoon.

J. C. ROGERS VEXED AT SUICIDE STORY

NEW YORK, May 11.—Jacob Crowninshield Rogers, the Salem real estate broker, at present in New York, is at a loss to account for the alarm of his friends that the body of the still unidentified man found in Central Park resembled him. He says he has been at his office every day, and is considerably vexed that it should have been thought that he had committed suicide. Mr. Rogers believes that someone has been playing a practical joke on him. He went to the trouble yesterday of calling up friends in Salem by long-distance telephone.

BIG CYCLONE IN NORTHWEST

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 11.—Scores of houses were demolished and many persons injured in a cyclone which swept northern Minnesota and North Dakota to-day.

The path of the storm was through the Canadian Northwest, but owing to destruction of telegraph wires for miles around, communication with that section is cut off.

More than twenty-five houses were damaged at Fargo, N. D., and the electric light system demolished.

At Felton, Minn., several houses were wrecked and Andrew Peterson, a farmer, fatally hurt in the collapse of his barn.

At Moorehead and Marion, Minn., buildings were tossed about in the air like straws, and near Litchfield several hundred head of valuable horses and cattle were killed.

Farm buildings and structures at East Grand Forks, Minn., were destroyed. Rain fall was reported from all over the Northwest and practically every telegraph line is down.

He will begin his duties with the coming academic year in the graduate school of applied science.

Mr. Whipple was born in 1866 in New Boston, N. H., but he received his preliminary education in the Chelsea public schools. In 1880 he graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Since that time he has practiced his profession.

ASKS FOR A DRINK AFTER 4-STORY FALL

James Murphy, aged forty-five, who lives at Washington street and Academy Hill road, Brighton, fell from the roof to the basement of a four-story building in process of construction at Albany and Bristol streets. Other workmen hastened down to the basement expecting to find him dead; instead he raised his head and said: "What happened boys?" and asked for a drink of water. A few bad scratches on the forehead seemed to be the only internal injuries. He was taken to the City Hospital, where it was said he is expected to recover.

BABIES RESCUED IN BROOKLINE FIRE

Several families fled by the fire escapes when fire broke out in a twelve-family dwelling at Nos. 18 and 20 Roberts street, Brookline, last night. The flames started in the apartment of Mrs. Margaret Murray on the second floor in the rear. Mrs. Thomas McGrail, who lives on the floor above, found the smoke too dense for flight by the stairway. She gathered up her two babies and carried them down the fire escape past the flames which were issuing from the windows. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A graceful manner of walking has a charm and a distinction that nothing can replace. O'Sullivan's Heels of New Live Rubber are made to fit women's shoes.

Weak Over-worked Women

Who are broken down and made invalids by the drudgery of never ending household cares and duties, or by over-frequent bearing and nursing of children, and many other cares, burdens and strains which the weaker sex have to bear, are deserving of profound sympathy. But while sympathy is commendable what these unfortunate women most need is a good, honest, square-deal Restorative Tonic and Strength-giving Nervine and Regulator—one compounded and carefully adapted to act in harmony with woman's peculiar, delicate, ever sensitive organization.

Who so well fitted to select, carefully proportion the ingredients and compound a remedy for the cure of these distressing and often pain-wracking weaknesses and derangements, as the carefully and thoroughly educated and regularly graduated physician who has had a long and successful experience in treating just this class of cases.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

THIS MEDICINE IS

THE ONE REMEDY* Now, and for over 40 years, sold by druggists for Woman's Peculiar Weaknesses, and Distressing Ailments, gotten up by one having all of the above qualifications.

THE ONE REMEDY* which absolutely contains neither alcohol (which to most Women is rank poison) nor injurious or habit-forming drugs.

THE ONE REMEDY* which is so perfect in its composition and so good in its curative effects as to warrant its makers in printing its every ingredient, as they do, on its outside wrapper, verifying the same under solemn oath.

In all the above most important particulars, the "Favorite Prescription" stands absolutely alone—in a class all by itself—as woman's most reliable and trust-worthy remedy in time of sickness and distress. It is a pure glyceric extract made from American curative roots, found by long time experience most valuable in curing woman's weaknesses and derangements. The leaders in all schools of medical practice have endorsed each of its ingredients as of the best known remedies for the complicated affections for which it is recommended. These professional endorsements should count for far more than any number of lay testimonials. A booklet full of them sent free on receipt of name and address.

ROCHE TWINS GO TO FATHER

NEW YORK, May 11.—Maurice and Francis Burke-Roche, twin sons of Frank Work's eldest daughter, threw up their $60 a month jobs, and sailed yesterday for England to see their father, James B. Burke-Roche, and to visit London and Paris.

Most of their fellow tourists on the big Cunarder Lusitania regarded the athletic youths with admiration not unmixed with awe. It was whispered that the Burke-Roche boys were forfeiting an income approximately $250,000 a year from their grandfather's estate by visiting England in the lifetime of their father, whom Frank Work disliked as much as he did their stepfather, Aurel Batonyi.

However, Maurice, who is the elder of the boys by a few minutes, and as such, is heir presumptive to the Irish barony of Fermoy, assured interviewers he and his brother were entirely within their rights in making their trip.

"We have received legal advice," said Maurice, "and we have been informed we are entirely within our rights. We are going to London first, then to Paris, and will return to London for the coronation. We will be back in New York by the middle of July."

The meeting was to discuss the formation of a council of all the immigration societies to supervise the work of immigrant homes. Immigration Commissioner Williams, Miss Morgan and Miss Frances Keller, of the State Bureau of Industry and Immigration, spoke.

The funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

"French Heel Cramp"

Tells Remarkable Home Treatment for This and all Foot Troubles

In France this is known as "Peine de Talon Haut" and in this country as "French Heel Cramp," and is now a serious affliction among the ladies. It comes from wearing high heeled shoes which throw the weight of the body on muscles unfitted by nature to carry the strain. This malady shows itself by intense pain through the instep that frequently involves the whole nervous system, and the feet are extremely sore and tender. For this and all foot troubles here is absolutely the best treatment known to science: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of hot water, soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently massaging the sore parts. (Less time will not give desired results.) Repeat this each night until cure is permanent." The effect will be a revelation. All pain goes as if by magic and the feet feel simply delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. Bunions have the inflammation all drawn out and are reduced to normal. Sweaty and smelly feet, swollen and tender feet need but a few treatments. Calocide was formerly confined to doctors' use, but any druggist now has it in stock or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. A twenty-five cent package is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. This item will be especially welcome to those who have been vainly trying patent powders and tablets.

GIVES SKIN TO SAVE DAUGHTER

"When a youngster who has been suffering in a hospital for six months pipes up as cheerful as you please, 'If papa can stand it, I guess I can,' there isn't much for a grown man to boast about in doing what I did. All this hero business makes me weary."

Sergeant Charles T. Reardon of the City Hall avenue police station looked as if he meant what he said. He was plainly bored at being greeted to-day as the most modest and the grittiest man on the Boston police force and explaining to every friend he met, and there are hosts who know and like him, how he had forty odd pieces of skin taken from his thigh and grafted on to his eleven-year-old daughter.

Story Learned by Accident.

If it had been left to Sergeant Reardon to tell the story it would never have come out. His comrades noticed at roll call Wednesday that he limped a bit and they joked with him a bit about playing ball on his day off, which was Tuesday, because he looked more cheerful than he has since Doris Reardon was taken to the City Hospital away back in November, with her body terribly burned. Her clothing had caught fire while she was playing with schoolmates in front of her home at No. 45 Stonehurst street, Dorchester.

Then one of Reardon's mates, calling up the hospital to find out how the girl was, learned the sacrifice the modest Sergeant had made in order that the child may come home to him months earlier than the doctors expected.

The burns had been very slow in healing, and one day Reardon who, with his wife, had been a daily visitor at the hospital, asked one of the doctors if her recovery could not be hastened by taking some of his healthy skin and grafting it on to the little body. After a consultation Dr. Hepburn decided that it could be done.

"Well, don't tell anyone about it," said Reardon, "I'll come in on my day off and you can perform the operation then."

With his wife Sergeant Reardon appeared at the hospital Tuesday. Doris was told all about what was going to be done and asked if she wanted to take ether.

Girl Declines Ether.

"No," she replied with the Reardon grit, "If papa can stand it, I guess I can."

So father and daughter were put on adjoining tables and skilfully and quickly Dr. Hepburn began taking bits of skin from the man and grafting them into the wounds of the child. Neither winced, but after the ninth grafting the surgeons saw that they'd better give Doris an anaesthetic.

Reardon lay cheerfully at her side until the forty-third piece of skin had been taken. Then the doctors bandaged his leg and he went home. But he was on duty the next day just as usual.

At the hospital to-day Doris Reardon was reported very much better and the surgeons said that it would not be long, probably, before she is at home again with her father.

CHARLES F. REARDON

HAGERTY HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Thomas Hagerty, the Roxbury widower who last Wednesday killed his three small daughters by turning on the gas in the room at No. 101 Calumet street as they slept, was to-day arraigned in the Roxbury Municipal Court on the charge of murder. Hagerty was first arraigned last Thursday and his case continued until to-day.

At his previous arraignment he stared vacantly from between the bars of the prison pen, seemingly unconscious of the proceedings or people in the courtroom. To-day he smiled at friends, beckoned to some and was attentive to all that went on about him. He was represented by Attorney James H. Kenney and waived examination. He was held without bail for the Grand Jury.

Richard Hagerty, the accused man's brother, was in court to-day with a Mrs. Hickey, a cousin. Hagerty asked his brother about the children, where they were buried and if a new lot had been purchased for their burial.

MIKADO HONORS BROOKLINE WOMAN

Miss Maria Wolters of No. 1619 Beacon street, Brookline, native of Germany, naturalized American and a teacher of languages, has received a letter from the Secretary of the Bureau of Decoration at Tokio, Japan, containing the information that by order of the Emperor the bureau has awarded her a diploma and silver loving cup in recognition of her services to Japanese subjects during the Russo-Japanese war and subsequent famine in Japan. To aid widows and orphans of Japanese soldiers who had lost their lives in the war, she gave public readings and entertainments in Brookline.

FARMERS SURRENDER MILK STRIKE WAR

PLAINFIELD, Ct., May 11.—The farmers, who have been on strike against handling milk at the depot, have voted to surrender and in the future load the milk as demanded by the Milk Dealers' Association. They have lost 6,000 quarts in the last ten days. Producers at Sterling, Oneco, Canterbury, Packerville and other places appeared and loaded their milk to-day.

GIRL STRIKERS WILL ARBITRATE

Arbitration of the two-day strike of the girl night-dress makers employed by the Kingston Manufacturing Company at No. 19 Kingston street, was agreed upon today. The questions involved by this agreement will now be referred to the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration for adjustment.

In a statement issued by the girl strikers, who have been organised as a branch of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union with headquarters at the Warrenton-street rooms of the Woman's Trade Union League, it is claimed that the strike was called after the firm had announced a cut to 35 cents a dozen for making a certain kind of nightdress.

This was denied by representatives of the firm, who declared that no cut in wages had been contemplated, although they had discontinued the manufacture of one number of nightdress entirely because the price formerly paid, 40 cents a dozen, was so much higher than that paid by their competitors that it could not be made at a profit.

This contention, however, with other grievances, has been referred to the State Board of Arbitration.

TO DIVORCE SAME HUSBAND TWICE

Married again to her once divorced husband just to please a whim of her dying father, Mrs. Mary E. Mawhinney of Charlestown appeared before Judge Hitchcock seeking divorce from James H. Mawhinney for the second time.

She was first married to Mawhinney in Boston, April 19, 1896. She filed a libel for divorce February 5, 1903, in the Suffolk Superior Court, charging him with cruel and abusive treatment, intoxication and non-support. She was granted a decree nisi May 15, 1903, on the non-support charge, and was given the custody of her child, James V., then a little over a year old.

When her father was dying of a lingering illness last Fall, she testified, the old man begged her to make up with her divorced husband for the sake of the child. Out of respect for her father's wishes she married Mawhinney a second time, October 24, 1910.

Hardly was the honeymoon over, she testified, when her husband began to treat her cruelly and to get drunk. After preferring two charges of assault against him, and after the death of her father, last January, she filed the libel for divorce.

Judge Hitchcock had the libelee called.

JOSEPH'S STORY TOLD IN SONG

"Joseph's Bondage" will be given again to-morrow evening in St. Alphonsus Hall, Roxbury, and the rest of the performances announced are for Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings next week and probably one on Sunday afternoon, May 21. The latter will be a special performance. The presentation is by members of the choir of the Mission Church, under the direction of F. E. Fassnacht, organist.

"Joseph's Bondage" is a dramatic cantata telling in song the scriptural story of Jacob and his sons. It depicts the sale of Joseph into slavery by his brothers, his temptation in Egypt, his rise there to a high administrative post and of his being able at last to present his father and brothers at the court of Pharoah.

It is an entertainment which has been highly praised by the critical, and the production reflects great credit upon members of the cast and the management. The role of Joseph is sung by Professor Joseph C. Haine, and that of Jacob by Thomas Kerr, who have voices of unusual range and quality.

The performance on Friday evening, May 19, will be attended by Mrs. Joseph L. Mahoney of No. 1,238 Commonwealth avenue and 100 friends to give the singers an ovation and to present them with flowers.

POPE'S HEALTH CAUSES ANXIETY

LONDON, May 11.—The Rome correspondent of the London Daily News informs his paper that there is grave anxiety expressed over the condition of the Pope. It is said that the Pope displays symptoms of arterial degeneration, a feeble heart and rapidly failing powers of resistance.

Just as she arose from her chair, after eating breakfast, Mrs. Clara E. Merrifield, age fifty-seven, wife of Waldo Merrifield, No. 276 Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park, dropped dead to-day from heart failure. Dr. Charles H. Sturdevant, medical examiner, was called. Mrs. Merrifield had been in poor health for some time.

MRS. SULLY TO PAY $28,536

Mrs. Daniel J. Sully, wife of the erstwhile "Cotton King," must pay $28,536.66 to Peter F. Corr, cotton manufacturer of Taunton. Corr was awarded that sum by a jury in the Supreme Court at New York to-day in his suit for the recovery of $20,000 he lent to her March 24, 1904, just after Sully had gone into bankruptcy as the result of his attempt to corner the cotton market.

This verdict, which includes interest, annuls the testimony of the Sullys, who both swore that Corr had made the loan to Sully as an investment on the score of friendship. Sully appeared at the trial armed with an order from Justice Blanchard forbidding any one from serving him with papers in any of the suits that have followed him, even after his discharge from bankruptcy.

Sully declared that it was very important for him to be free of legal entanglements in order to press in Washington the suit he has brought against John Hays Hammond, whom President Taft has appointed special envoy for the United States to the coronation of King George. He is suing Hammond for $1,500,000 for alleged injuries which resulted from Hammond's interference with a plan he had to sell the rights to a new cotton gin in England.

Corr testified that during the troublous days of the cotton smash Mrs. Sully called him up while he was in Philadelphia and asked him for $25,000 as a personal loan to be used to protect the furniture in her home.

Corr advanced $20,000. Sully's version of the transaction was that Corr called him up and offered voluntarily to advance the money, saying that he had learned that District Attorney Jerome was preparing to indict Sully and that he (Corr) was prepared to lend him $20,000 to retain competent counsel.

GIBBONS HONORED ON HIS GOLDEN JJUBILEE

NEW YORK, May 11—"No citizen should be a drone in the social beehive. No man among you should be an indifferent spectator of the moral, political and economic questions which affect the welfare of the Commonwealth. As you are all protected in your life and property by the strong arm of the government, so should you all unite in upholding the hands of those who are charged with the administration of the Commonwealth."

This was Cardinal Gibbons's response to addresses of welcome at the reception given by the Catholic Club in honor of the golden jubilee of the ordination as a priest and the silver jubilee of the elevation to the cardinalate of the only American Prince of the Church.

BLUE JACKET WINS BRIDE BY EXPLOSION

A romance of sea and shore, battleship turret and hospital, culminated in Brockton in the ringing of wedding bells for Miss Josephine Le May and William E. Ryan. The bridegroom has been one of "the men behind the guns" in Uncle Sam's Navy, enlisting four years ago because his future bride, then just entering her teens, would not listen to his love pleadings. Two years ago when there was an explosion on the Georgia at the Charlestown Navy Yard, Ryan was wounded. Miss Le May hastened to his side. Her presence lent him hope, which resulted in a speedy cure of his injuries.

AGED MOTHER SUES DAUGHTER

A bill in equity to prevent her daughter, Julia, from withdrawing any portion of $2,800, deposited in several savings banks, was filed by Mrs. Elizabeth Rick, an aged woman, in the Suffolk Superior Court to-day. Mrs. Rick asks also in her bill that her daughter be compelled to turn over these funds to her.

The mother states that she is seventy years old, that on May 1, 1910, she sustained a nervous shock and not being able to take care of herself, she went to her daughter's home, she gave her daughter a power of attorney, so that she could withdraw the mother's money from the bank in order to pay bills.

With the power of attorney, the daughter, according to her mother's will, withdrew all her money and re-deposited it in her own name. Mrs. Rick says she has not been able to get the money since.

Judge Pierce issued a temporary injunction restraining the daughter from withdrawing any part of the money until the case is heard upon its merits later.

CARS PLUNGE INTO RIVER; TWO KILLED

DENVER, May 11.—A West-bound Denver & Rio Grande passenger train, the "Pacific Coast Flyer," was wrecked near Minturn, thirty miles west of Leadville, last night. A chair car and tourist sleeper plunged into Eagle River, which is skirted by the railroad at that point. Two were killed and twenty-seven injured.

DODGE VERDICT NEAR AT HAND

that the brush is the one, although I think it is," replied Mrs. Dodge.

At 9:04 the defence closed its sur-rebuttal through Attorney Blodgett. Attorney Amey then laid a plan of the interior of the house on the easel. All of the attorneys had a conference at the bench. It was decided that each of the attorneys might speak as long as he liked.

State Attorney Opens.

State Attorney Amey began his argument at 9:12. He said in part:

"There isn't any question but that this man had been killed, and we have been called upon to investigate his death. The State has endeavored since September 17 last to find who killed Mr. Heath.

"The effort of the attorneys of this defendant has been to cast an impression in your minds that William A. Heath shot himself.

"William A. Heath never shot himself, purposely or accidentally, the State asserts. We say that William A. Heath was shot while he was on his knees at the baseboard.

"We, in our investigation, found no powder marks on his clothing and that tossed the theory of suicide to the winds. The appearance of the room immediately after the crime is more evidence than all the medical expert testimony that can be brought before you.

"He was at work indoors puttying, papering, or painting at the time of this crime. You heard Mrs. Dodge, the only person in that house, say that she took charge of the work. You heard Balch, the undertaker, say that there was putty on the dead man's hands. Wouldn't Heath be working in that corner of the room, down on his knees, looking for places to fix in the wall or casing of that door? While he was in such a position he could receive a shot from the front door or front hall."

Shooting Is Illustrated.

Amey then used the plan of interior of house to illustrate how the shot could be fired from the front hall.

"God knows what Heath was doing," continued Amey. "He might have been on his knees praying to God to save him from the bullets coming from behind."

Mrs. Heath began crying softly. Mrs. Dodge looked straight ahead, manifesting no emotion.

"When a person shoots another, the person thinks of how he or she can escape," said Amey. "The person frequently goes out and gives the alarm. But the person always leaves a screw loose somewhere. In this case, the wound in the body and the revolver so far from his hand were the screws loose, to cast aside the theory that Heath purposely or accidentally shot himself.

"Mrs. Dodge had exclusive opportunity. There was no one else in the house, and he was shot with her revolver. It was impossible for him to kill himself and it was done with her revolver.

Where Experts Agree.

"Mrs. Dodge said she was in kitchen thirty feet away. She said she heard two shots. She must have heard three shots. That tends to impeach her testimony.

"Every expert in this case for either side has come to the conclusion that it was impossible for Mr. Heath to be shot while on his knees by a person standing in door.

"What was Mrs. Dodge thinking of when she said, 'I didn't know it was loaded?' Perhaps she was paving the way for her to say that she accidentally shot Mr. Heath.

"I want to give the woman a fair chance. I am here to present the facts to you and nothing more. Not one bit of evidence has been put in here that Heath had any suicidal intentions.

"She shot Heath and then on the impulse of the moment tried to cover her tracks.

Saw the Painter Fall.

"In her story she said he fell on his face. How did she know he fell down on his face unless she saw him? She was there, looking at him, when he fell down. That is one of the unconscious habits of a person. When she spoke about going to prison she had a guilty conscience. One doesn't have that in mind when a person commits suicide in one's house.

Amey took the revolver and pointed out to the jury that it would not stay cocked.

"How can a man drop that and shoot himself in the breast bone?" he asked. "When Mrs. Dodge said 'Oh, that poor woman,' meaning Mrs. Heath, she said it in repentance for the poor widow. Well, could she say it because with her hand she made Mrs. Heath a widow!"

Mrs. Heath Breaks Down.

Mrs. Heath again broke down and cried bitterly. She was seated among the spectators on the left side of the court room facing the judge.

"The testimony here shows that she was not familiar with firearms," continued Mr. Amey. "We don't know whether she could aim a gun. We don't think that she looked over the sight to take aim. We don't think she was going to shoot him through the heart. She was after him and shot in the direction where Heath was."

Speaking of the anonymous letter received by the Attorney-General last December from Brookline, Mass., Amey said:

"That letter was written by Mrs. Dodge herself. Look at the letter written by her on the stand. See the similarities. In the letter from Brookline she was trying to disguise her hand.

"Mrs. Dodge shows she is a deep-dyed villain when she writes such a letter to throw the State off her track. In both letters the word 'laid' is spelled 'layed,' and the word 'cellar' in one is spelled 'seller' and in the other 'sellar,' both spelled with an 's.' These mistakes would not be made were not both letters written by one and the same person. The initials in both letters, 'M. J. S.,' are the same."

Amey then showed the two letters to the jury. Judge Hall instructed each juryman not to make any comment on the letters, as they have not heard all that will be said about the letters.

"The first two shots, we declare," said Aurey in conclusion, "were fired while she was advancing into the room and the third shot killed Heath."

Relatives in Court.

Mrs. Ira Blood of Lunenburg and Mrs. Irving Blood, of St. Johnsbury, sister-in-law of Mrs. Dodge, were in court to-day for the first time. Mrs. Dodge kissed the two women affectionately before court opened and their presence cheered her up a great deal. Irving Blood and Ira Blood were also present for the first time. Mrs. Dodge and her brothers and sister, [illegible] a reunion at the morning recess.

Harland B. Howe began his speech for the defence about noon. In the course of his address he said:

"The District Attorney has cried murder to you. He has spoken of premeditation, malice, of capital crime. But let me remind him and you that before speaking of these things he must have proved them. To cry them is one thing. To prove them is another, for Mrs. Dodge is presumed to be innocent until she is shown guilty.

"There is a great difference between the rule in a civil case and in a case of this kind, where the life and liberty and the good name of a good woman is at stake. If you can in any reasonable way reconcile the evidence with the theory that she is not guilty, you must do so, and acquit her."

SUFFRAGE MEETING.

At the Charles street African M. E. church to-night at 8, will be held a meeting to promote the cause of equal suffrage. This meeting has been arranged by Miss May L. Waytes, a minister, under the auspices of the Massachusetts, and Boston Equal Suffrage Associations. There will be singing, and addresses will be made by Mrs. Maud W. Park, Dr. T. W. Henderson, pastor of the church, Miss Josephine P. Ruffin, and Mrs. L. A. Smith.

NEWS NOTES OF THE THEATRES

Jess Dandy, who, by reason of his continued intercourse with the fountain in "The Prince of Pilsen," has been called America's foremost amphibious comedian, denies that the collection of seals he has gathered at his Summer home has any significance to the charge made by his manager, Tom Hodgman, that his affection for trained seals is the result of his own splashing about in water during the fountain scene of the play. An interesting coincidence in connection with Mr. Dandy's seals is the rival collection of eels that his understudy, Al Jacoby, has dumped into a big pool on his place on Long Island. Mr. Jacoby is willing to wager that his eels have more real intelligence than Mr. Dandy's seals.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, the novelist, has been in England for some time, but she has sailed for America again, and it is possible that she may be in Boston for the first production of her latest play "Judy O'Hara," at the Hollis next Monday.

Miss Lillian Lawrence's last appearance at the Castle Square was as the heroine of "The Devil," three seasons ago.

The Shuberts will produce at the Shubert Theatre on May 22 a new Viennese operetta entitled "The Kiss Waltz," with a cast including Eva Davenport, Charles Bigelow, Van Rensselaer Wheeler, Elsa Ryan, Maud Lambert, Edith Bradford, Edgar Atchison Ely and Charles Angelo.

Aphie James promises to give Boston one of the most interesting productions of the season when she comes to the Hollis next Monday in "Judy O'Hara." This romantic historical play was written by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett in collaboration with Frederic Arthur Stanley of London.

With the present week the regular seasons at the Boston Theatre and Grand Opera House will come to an end. It was expected that "When Sweet Sixteen" would follow "The Old Town" at the Boston, but the booking was cancelled yesterday. The Boston will reopen for a single performance of the Friars show sometime in June.

The new plays announced for next week are "A Country Girl" at the Tremont, "Judy O'Hara" at the Hollis, "The Girl of the Golden West," by the Lindsay Morrison Stock Company, at the Majestic, and "The White Sister," at the Castle Square Theatre.

JUNIOR WEEK AT WESLEYAN

1,000 FEET UP, HALF AN HOUR

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y., May 11.—Thomas Sopwith, the famous English aviator, who arrived yesterday, made a sensational flight at the Mineola aerodome to-day, using the first tandem Bleriot monoplane ever made. Sopwith remained aloft thirty-five minutes, flying at an average altitude of 1,000 feet.

Sopwith started a second flight, but his machine went wrong and fell to earth, the aviator sustaining painful cuts and bruises. It will require a week to repair the monoplane.

In the machine with Sopwith on the second flight was Philip Wilcox, an aviator of considerable experience. Mr. Wilcox was bruised, but not fatally hurt.

WHITE PRAISES GRAND TRUNK

Representative Norman H. White of Brookline declared that the entry of the Grand Trunk railroad into Boston would be the salvation of the city. He asserted this during his address at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church in Lynn. Mr. White scored the New Haven road heavily and stated it's railroad monopoly had been acquired in defiance of the laws of the land and the laws of the State. He expressed his firm belief that tremendous benefit would accrue both to Boston and New England as a whole through the presence in Boston of two great competing trunk lines. He said in part:

Monopoly Bad for Boston.

"Transportation throughout the New England States is now controlled by a railroad monopoly acquired in defence of the laws of our land and our State. This monopoly extends its arms to every portion of New England and also covers our entire sea coast. I believe this situation is detrimental to the best interests of the great seaport of Boston.

"The New Haven has purchased its properties, many of them at huge prices, and it is now in a financial position whereby it does not dare meet any reasonable competition. I believe the New Haven's influence is detrimental to our interests, both in the halls of legislation and in our great transportation problems.

Must Have Competition.

"Competition is the very essence of trade and commerce, and while I do not believe in having a great many competing lines, I do believe that Boston and New England should not be subject to the dictatorship of one monopoly in transportation. The Grand Trunk with its great influence, can assist the citizens of New England in obtaining a railroad line which will pour the great products from the Western wheat fields and the undeveloped Northwest into our seaports.

"It is the duty of every citizen in this crisis to use his utmost influence to obtain the entrance of the Grand Trunk into the port of Boston. It takes the citizens of any State a long time to arouse themselves, but I find that little by little the real situation is dawning on our business men, and I think they will agree with me that the only salvation of New England is to give those gentlemen who have broken our laws and have established this greatest of transportation monopolies a competition which will be of great benefit to Massachusetts and the entire New England States."

DEDHAM READY TO GIVE WELCOME TO GRAND TRUNK

The Citizens' Progressive League, one of the leading organizations in Dedham, including in its membership prominent business and professional men of the town, have adopted resolutions commending the AMERICAN'S efforts to bring the Grand Trunk to Boston, and urging the Grand Trunk to establish its eastern terminal in Boston.

The resolutions were unanimously passed. Dr. Bernard H. Whitney, one of the leading physicians in Dedham, spoke highly of the AMERICAN'S campaign. Francis A. McKenna, president of the league, urged the members to do their utmost to help along the movement. The resolutions follow:

Be it resolved that,

Whereas, the entry of the Grand Trunk Railroad into Boston would stimulate the commerce and develop the latent resources of that city by affording direct connections with the great Northwest and other trade centres of the United States and Canada, and,

Whereas, any movement that would serve to reawaken Boston commercially would benefit the commerce of Dedham; therefore,

Be it resolved, that we, the Citizens' Progressive League of Dedham, herewith join with other boards of trade and legislative bodies of the cities and towns in Metropolitan Boston in urging the Grand Trunk Railroad System to make Boston its eastern terminal, and that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the editor of the Boston AMERICAN and the directors of the Grand Trunk Railway.

GREAT ENTRY LIST FOR GOLF TOURNEY

With eighty outside entries, the Country Club Spring tournament starts at the Clyde Park course this morning, and with the usual quota of club entrants the field should be very near a record one. Practically every golfing star of the local golfing firmament is entered, besides several from other districts.

At the last moment, Parker W. Whittemore found it necessary that he remain in Boston for the time being, and as a result he will be among the starters to-day.

NEW PARISHES ARE CREATED

Two new parishes have been created and a new head of the Catholic Charitable Bureau, a new director of the Propagation of the Faith and three new pastors have been appointed by Archbishop O'Connell, it was announced to-day. With the recent appointment of three other new pastors, this is the most sweeping change made in the archdiocese for several years.

The Rev. Garrett J. Barry of Foxboro has been transferred to the new parish in Charlestown. To the new parish in South Framingham Centre the Rev. Augustine D. Malley, chaplain of the Charlestown State Prison, is sent.

Father O'Rourke Goes to Foxboro.

The other new pastor is the Rev. James A. O'Rourke, now at St. Margaret's Church, Campello, who has been appointed to succeed the Rev. Garrett J. Barry at Foxboro.

The Rev. M. J. Scanlan of the Cathedral [illegible] table purposes. He succeeds the Rev. Dr. Maurice J. O'Connor [illegible] South End.

MRS. M'KENNA WRITES HOME

John McKenna of Newton, whose wife's disappearance with her two infant children a week ago was for some days a mystery, has received the following note:

"John—Please send my trunk. I need [illegible] for the children.
158 Riverdale ave.,
"Yonkers, N. Y."

Mr. McKenna now believes his wife went away during a fit of mental derangement. Close friends of the family say that a year ago she showed signs of mental weakness and they resent intimations that Mrs. McKenna's sudden flight was caused by domestic troubles.

NELL BRINKLEY ESCAPES HOOFS

NEW ROCHELLE, May 11.—Nell Brinkley, the illustrator who delights thousands of the AMERICAN'S readers daily, had a narrow escape from death when she was thrown from her saddle during the shopping hour yesterday afternoon on Main street near the City Hall. An auto[illegible] driven by Miss Lottie Seed of Pelham Heights struck her horse. Miss Brinkley was bruised and severely shaken.

Miss Brinkley, who lives at No. 187 Elm street, was out with her riding instructor, Mrs. Theresa L. Clark. Miss Reed's automobile approached from behind. In it, besides Miss Seed, were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Miles A. Seed, and her sister, Miss Eleanor Seed. In trying to thread her way through the vehicles on Main street Miss Seed lost control of her car. Miss Brinkley was hurled under her horse's hoofs.

PUBLIC GARDEN TULIPS BLOOM

Eighty thousand tulip plants have sprung into blossom in the Public Garden within the last few days of warm weather, and the garden, on the Beacon street mall, presents a near-Midsummer appearance. [illegible] of the city gardeners.

The tulips have apparently just decided that it was time for Summer. The 80,000 blossoms which the gardeners expected to uncurl, flaunting their scarlet, golden and pink petals, in a leisurely fashion, suddenly flared into bloom. They blossomed everywhere.

"In all the years that I have been in the garden I never have seen anything shoot into bloom the way these tulips have done," said Mr. Dillon.

Next to bloom will be the pansies.

News Bureau Quoted.

The Boston News Bureau, regarded as a semi-official source of information from the New Haven railroad, [illegible] to assure the stockholders of that thriving property that they need not fear their 8 per cent dividend would be cut.

"The cutting of the Boston & Maine dividend," the News Bureau said, "as we said last week [illegible] has led to apprehension lest such reduction be but the forerunner of [illegible] by other members of the New Haven Railroad family. Naturally the small margin of surplus earnings [illegible] over New Haven's eight per cent dividend [illegible] created the fear [illegible] Mr. Mellen might be forced by circumstances to omit his control to lower the disbursement to his shareholders. It is only natural that such fear should be increased by the Boston & Maine reduction.

"We last week stated on the authority of President Mellen himself that for the first nine months of the current fiscal year the New Haven road had shown, within a very small margin, its full 8 per cent dividend requirements for that period and that for the twelve months there would probably be less than 1 per cent [illegible] or below the amount required to pay the regular dividend.

"We can emphatically reiterate the statement [illegible] directors have no thought of cutting the New Haven dividend for the very good reason that the dividend will be earned, and right here it may be well to state that never before in the history of the road were the net divisible earnings more estimately arrived at."

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

HARVARD NINE
PAYS OLD DEBT
TO AMHERST

BUSTER BROWN AND GEORGE SUGGS TODAY

By R. W. LARDNER.

The Rustlers haven't been doing very well against these people from Cincinnati, but there is still time to even up on the series and take a little of the chestiness out of Garry Hermann's hired help.

Having failed twice to down the Ohioans with left-handed pitching, Manager Tenney probably will switch this afternoon and work Buster Brown. If Al Mattern had come through with a victory yesterday, Pat Flaherty probably would have been the favorite to-day. But Al didn't, so Buster is the probable choice.

Manager Griffith hasn't shown us his best yet. He still has George Suggs in his stable and George is some pitcher. He is so much of a pitcher that Hugh Jennings, who once had him at Detroit, is still wondering why he let him go. Probably if Jennings had Suggs now, the Tigers would have had twenty-one victories and no defeats, so it's perhaps just as well that Hughey overlooked this Suggs party, else the seven other American League clubs would be ready to give up.

All About Ruelbach.

That Rustler pitching staff is likely to look a lot better if Big Ed Reulbach is added to it. [illegible] to [illegible] has [illegible] necessarily so.

he happens to be, and make the Cub leader sorry he let him out.

Reulbach has a fast ball that is the wonder and admiration of every other major league pitcher. He also has a wonderful sharp breaking curve. Speed is his [illegible] asset and [illegible] almost impossible to meet his delivery squarely when his control enables him to use all his stuff. If the Rustlers can land him and if he "comes around," just as he had done ever since he broke into the big league, there will be some victories in Boston's column that weren't counted on before. Reulbach probably would be willing to pitch here, for his wife's family lives in Vermont and he formerly attended the university at Burlington. He has friends and relatives in this part of the country and has always liked the East.

It looks as if Jack Pfiester was another victim of Manager Chance's impatience. Jack had been a wonderful performer. He was taken sick this Spring and hasn't [illegible] much. If his ineffectiveness is only temporary [illegible] Rustlers [illegible] with southpaws [illegible] find room for Jack [illegible] would undoubtedly [illegible]

Four Home Runs.

But you must remember that waivers have been asked and withdrawn before this. Mr. Chance [illegible] just "feeling" the other teams to see what ones are in the [illegible]. It's nowhere near a cinch that Reulbach and Pfiester won't be hurling [illegible] the end of this very season.

Yesterday's conflict at the South End grounds was the longest of the big league season. The Rustlers were trimmed 8 to 7, but it took Cincinnati fifteen innings to turn the trick. The battle was remarkable for its home runs. The Reds amassed four of them and wouldn't have had a single tally in the regular nine innings without the wallops out of the park.

[illegible] Beck floated one to Columbus avenue in the second round, but his tally was the only one scored. Dick Egan crashed a [illegible] one over the railroad tracks in the [illegible] and the bases were choked with Reds at the time. Tom Clarke poled one in the seventh, and Dick Hoblitzell did the stunt in the eleventh.

It was a tough one to lose, but there is consolation in the fact that several gray hairs were added to Clark Griffith's [illegible]

PARALYSIS YIELDS TO DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

Many Forms of the Dread Disease Are Curable by this Remedy

MR. LUCAS SAYS IT SAVED HIS LIFE

This Cleveland Man Was Getting Worse All the Time When He Began the Treatment, but Improvement Quickly Followed—Read His Grateful Statement

Fresh proof is furnished almost daily of the wonderful power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the treatment of the most severe nervous disorders. No claim is made for the treatment that is not substantiated by proof that is open to the most rigid investigation and the evidence is indisputable that there are many forms of paralysis that are readily curable by these tonic pills. In cases that are not entirely curable the use of Dr Williams' Pink Pills often results in such radical improvement that life is once more made worth living to the formerly hopeless sufferer.

The evidence upon which the claims of this remedy are based is not confined to a single case. [illegible] No sufferer from a severe nervous disorder who has not tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should abandon hope, for the remedy that has brought about these marvelous results for others is surely entitled to a thorough trial.

The Latest Evidence.

The most recent case to come to public attention is that of Mr. D. L. Lucas, of No 2183 East 103rd street, Cleveland, Ohio, a man well known in real estate circles in that city. He had a remarkable escape from death, as is shown by the following statement:

"My trouble started with a stomach disorder but I believe that malarial poisoning was the original cause and this was the opinion of the doctors who attended me. Creeping paralysis finally resulted from the broken down condition of my health and I came very near to death. During the greater part of my sickness I could get about the house by holding on to articles of furniture, but at times was confined to my bed.

Limbs Were Shrunken.

"The paralysis came on slowly but was never complete. I had trouble with my kidneys and my liver was torpid all the time. My lower limbs shrunk perceptibly, I suffered some with shooting pains, my appetite was feeble and I was altogether in a terrible condition.

"When the disease was at its worst I called my wife to my bedside and told her that I was getting worse all the time and if I kept on in this way there would be no help for me. I had taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People some time before and been benefited and I told her I thought that if I gave them a thorough, persistent trial they would do me good. She agreed with me and I started taking the pills. After a few doses I saw that the medicine was helping me and I continued the treatment, following the directions closely and obeying strictly the instructions regarding diet and bathing.

Can Now Walk Again.

"The improvement in my condition continued and I took the pills for eight months when I was able to get about and could walk any reasonable distance. I know that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People saved my life. My shrunken limbs are now restored to their normal condition and I am nearly free from the pains and the kidney and liver complications.

Opinion of a Physician.

"I know that if I had not taken the pills I would not be here today, and to show that this is not my opinion only I will say that I recently met in a business way, in one of the hotels of Cleveland, an eminent physician, the chief executive of a fraternal order of which I am a member. I described to him the treatment I had taken and he asked me what had caused my paralysis. I said 'Indigestion.' The doctor was much interested and addressing a subordinate in the order he said: 'I want you to meet Mr. Lucas. He is a living, walking testimonial to the efficiency of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After all he has gone through it is a wonder he is alive.' This was a great deal for a physician to say and confirms what I have stated absolutely."

(Signed) D. L. LUCAS.

The evidence in such cases as that of Mr. Lucas should convince the most sceptical, but because many of the cures by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are so marvelous as to challenge belief, the following offer is made:

$1,000 REWARD—The Dr. Williams Medicine Company will pay the sum of One Thousand Dollars for proof of fraud on its part in the publication of the foregoing statement of Mr. D. L. Lucas.

Schenectady, N. Y., May 1, 1911.

I hereby certify that the Dr. Williams Medicine Company has instructed this bank to pay for its account the sum of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00) to the first person presenting the proof necessary for the collection of the reward offered above.

J. E. VAN EPS, Cashier.
Union National Bank, Schenectady, N. Y.

No sufferer from paralysis, locomotor ataxia, St Vitus' dance or any nervous disorder resulting from or dependent upon a run-down condition of the system can afford longer to neglect Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, the great blood builder and nerve tonic. Send today for a copy of our booklet, "Nervous Disorders, a Method of Home Treatment." It will be sent free and postpaid to any address, upon request. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists throughout the world or will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes, $2.50. CLEVELAND, O., May 11.—If there is "Ivory" in a ball team it is bound to creep to the surface sooner or later. The Boston Red Sox [illegible] mistakes on the ball field. They have their share of ivory, the same as the Naps, Browns and other bowler teams.

Pat Donovan's boys pulled off some bad ones here Wednesday. First of all Nunamaker held the ball long enough for Jackson and Stovall to put over a steal, netting the Naps first run.

Williams aided materially in the good cause of the Naps when they scored three runs in the sixth, for after taking Turner's throw on Jackson's grounder, instead of putting his foot on the bag he [illegible] Papa [illegible] the ball while Jackson stole [illegible]. But for these Boston errors the Naps would never have scored these first [illegible] runs. In addition to this Yerkes, after [illegible] in the fifth, was caught [illegible] first on the ancient hidden ball trick.

The Red Sox were helpless before Vean Gregg's superb pitching. Only one man got past first base during the entire nine rounds—Williams, on his triple in the eighth. Three of the five hits [illegible] were the veriest sort of flukes, two [illegible] bounders and the other a pop fly over short.

Gregg has that necessary essential to a successful southpaw pitcher who owns a good curve. He has a fast ball that is fast, one that [illegible] the fastest of [illegible] owned by [illegible] left handed twirlers. Gregg [illegible] curves and fast ones and he had the effete Bostonians eating out of his hands.

Lewis and Jackson starred afield. The former robbed Turner of a home run by a sensational running catch over his shoulder in deep left centre. Jackson made two brilliant running catches. Lewis also made two beautiful assists, throwing Stovall out at the plate when he tried to score from second on a single, and nipping Olson at third when he endeavored to stretch his double into a triple by relaying the ball to Yerkes, who tossed to Engle.

RYAN, 125; KNOWLES, 113.

Ryan beat Knowles 125 to 113, last night in the twentieth game of the pool tournament at the White Bear. Owing to there being a tie for first place the deciding game will be played to-night between Ryan and Albertini.

CRIMSON PAYS AMHERST DEBT

All back accounts are settled between Harvard and Amherst on Soldiers Field [illegible] to the [illegible] victor in a 9 to 2 affray. Harvard always had everything its own way and neither of the pitchers arrayed against the Crimson batters were of much avail, a total of eleven hits, one a homer and another a three bagger being snatched by the Harvard sluggers. In addition Amherst contributed a number of errors [illegible] was plain sailing for Harvard.

WOODMAN RAPS FLYNN KNOCKERS

Joe Woodman, manager of Porky Flynn, sends the following letter to the AMERICAN, which speaks for itself:

"I would like to ask you to be kind enough to allow me space in your paper, which I have always found to be as fair as it is powerful, in order to make a brief reply to some of the self-appointed critics who have seen fit to discount [illegible] Flynn's [illegible] Jim Savage Tuesday night.

"All [illegible] boxing who happen to be practical men have long ago come to a realization of the fact that in no other branch of sport are so many four flushers posing as authorities as in boxing. Notwithstanding the fact that there is no cleaner [illegible] contest in the world [illegible] boxing, either in skill [illegible] interest, the noise [illegible] together with [illegible] gang of knockers [illegible] all boxing [illegible] no place that I have been in throughout the world is [illegible] so evident than right here in the [illegible] centre of culture, the city of [illegible] I belong myself, as do [illegible].

"[illegible] what they saw Tuesday night they should go to some place where their [illegible] work [illegible] and not to [illegible] as they are a serious handicap to boxing.

"I know I am voicing the feelings of [illegible] patronizing boxing [illegible] I speak as I do [illegible] to drive these [illegible] where [illegible] have my permission to go as far as you like."

BARGE BATTLE BEST SAYS RING VETERAN

By TAD.

[illegible] Delaney, the most famous handler of fighters in the country to-day, the man who brought both Jeffries and Corbett from oblivion to the top of the pugilistic ladder, is the writer of to-day's story.

He [illegible] the greatest fight he ever saw was the bout between Corbett and Choynski, which took place on a barge in California twenty-two years ago.

Delaney's [illegible] of the battle to the writer follows:

[illegible] Oakland, Cal.

My Dear [illegible]:

You asked me what the greatest [illegible] I ever saw was, and I'm going to tell you [illegible] between Corbett and Choynski was the toughest [illegible] I've ever seen or [illegible].

These two native sons met at a barn in Fairfax, California, on the 30th of May, 1889, to fight to a finish with [illegible] gloves. [illegible] few knew of the affair, yet the sheriff [illegible] stopped [illegible] and after four rounds of fighting the go was stopped and all hands came back to San Francisco.

A few days after the thing was fixed up again and they met on a barge anchored in the Straits of Carquinez, which are between the towns of Martinez and Benicia. It proved to be the [illegible] took place in the West.

They started fighting like two bulldogs [illegible], and never [illegible] alive until [illegible] the battle was over.

With the murderous little gloves they cut one another into ribbons, but instead of slowing up, the loss of blood seemed to spur them on and [illegible] furious. In the tenth round there was so much blood and both [illegible] were so cut and bruised that many of the spectators turned away in disgust. In the fourteenth the referee came over to Jim and asked him if he wasn't willing to have the thing called a draw. "Not on your life," replied Corbett, "I'll be to the [illegible] if I have to drag myself to the scratch."

[illegible] next round the referee, Patsy [illegible], tried to have Choynski agree to a draw, but Joe told him that if he wasn't satisfied to stick it out that they'd get another referee. Joe told him it was a battle to a finish and it must end with a win for one or the other. Neither man would stand for a draw but insisted upon fighting, when, as a matter of fact, neither had anything left but confidence. Up to this time there was no shade either way. It was first one, then the other, and at any time could have ended with a surprise.

In the eighteenth Joe was bleeding like a stuck pig. His mouth, nose and eyes were pouring forth blood. Corbett himself was bleeding from the mouth and nose, but his continual jabbing had Choynski worse off and they couldn't stop the flow of blood. Choynski was fading fast, but as both of Corbett's hands were broken at this time, he couldn't do much more than hold his way along.

In the twenty-eighth and last round, with both weak as kittens, Corbett palmed Joe with his left hand flush on the face. The jar stood Choynski up stiff, then he fell over on his back, dead to the world. He didn't move after hitting the floor. At the count of ten Corbett collapsed completely himself. When he did come to he looked up at me and asked whether he had won or lost.

I never did up to that time and never have since, seen so much cleverness, endurance and gameness displayed as I did in that bloody battle and this goes for both of them. I am sure if Jack Dempsey, who handled against me, was alive to-day and was asked to name the greatest battle he ever saw he would agree with me when I say that the greatest fight was the battle between those novices, Joe Choynski and Jim Corbett, years ago on the deck of an old barge off the shores of Benecia, Cal. Yours,

BILLY DELANEY.

CROUSE WHIPS "PECK" MILLER

ALTOONA, Penn., May 11.—Buck Crouse, the game little Pittsburg fighter, knocked out Peck Miller of Manayunk in the third round of what was to have been a six-round bout here last night.

Crouse had the better of the milling all the way through. He floored Miller in the first round and again in the second, and twice in the third. Toward the close of that round he whipped over a terrific right to the jaw and Peck went down for good.

Miller's gameness was wildly applauded by the crowd. Despite the fact that he was outclassed he fought back desperately until the end. Crouse escaped without a scratch.

PERELLI IN FAST WRESTLING BOUT

John Perelli, the Italian heavyweight wrestler, beat Jim Smart in straight falls at the Columbia last night in a match that embraced all kinds of work, fast, clever and rough. They were about even at rough house tactics, but Perelli outclassed and outspeeded his man at everything else. To-night Perelli will attempt to throw Ali Hassan and Fred Anson in fifteen minutes each or forfeit $25. Friday night Sam Anderson will try to win the money, and Saturday night Perelli and Jack Leon will meet in a special match.

COSTER-CONLEY BOUT FOR TITLE

NEW ORLEANS, May 11.—Joe Coster of New York and Frankie Conley of Kenosha, Wis., featherweights, will battle 20 rounds at the West Side A. C. late this month, to decide which lad shall wear the crown which Abe Attell is preparing to lay aside.

Coster and Conley will do their training here, and the bout will be billed about May 26.

KUAFMAN LOSES JOHNSON MATCH

Jack Johnson declares that the defeat of Al Kaufman received from Jim Flynn the other day prevents Kaufman from meeting him in a finish contest in September. Johnson says that they were practically matched, and that Kaufman would have received at least $20,000 for his end. It also lost Johnson a chance to get another big wad of money. Johnson is trying to get some of the Philadelphia promoters to offer a good purse for a six-round bout between him and Jim Flynn. The champion offers to stop Flynn in six rounds. He will have to show Flynn a good bit of money to get him to box.

HARVARD OFF FOR YALE MEET

By E. V. P. PARKE.

Harvard's army of track athletes leave Cambridge to-morrow to take the Knickerbocker express from Back Bay Station, whence they will be whisked away in their bi-annual descent upon the Elis in their own camp. About forty members of the team will go. Headquarters will be made in New Haven, where things will be taken pretty easy until the big time arrives when the Crimson and the Blue clash on Saturday afternoon on Yale Field.

Harvard is up against it this year, but nevertheless the Crimson is not at all dispirited, for the way the injured members of the team are improving in their performances gives rise to the hope that the outcome of the meet with Yale will be much different from that with Dartmouth last Saturday.

Captain Foster was out doing some hard work yesterday, and went through his paces in old time form, and gave every evidence of being in top-notch trim on Saturday. While he may not be able to duplicate his time of a couple of years ago, when he made a name for himself by winning both the hundred and the furlong in the intercollegiate meet, he will probably be able to give a good enough account of himself to cop the first place in the furlong and possibly a second in the hundred, although the latter is not being counted upon. Should he take first in the two twenty, Harvard's chances are much brighter, and the Crimson can regard the outcome of the coming meet more hopefully. Austin, the other sprinter, is entirely well again, and his presence in the hundred means much to the Crimson's chances.

In fact about everyone on the Harvard team is now as fit as they can be for the big meet, and they are going after old Eli with every intention of coming home the victors.

FREDDIE PARENT WILL NOT GO TO BALTIMORE

BIDDEFORD, Me., May 11—Freddie Parent of Sanford, who was recently sold by the Chicago American team to Baltimore of the Eastern League, says he will not join the Orioles.

Parent says he could have gone with two of the big league teams had the Chicago management allowed him to do so. Instead he was sent to Baltimore.

"I made a good showing in the three games I played this Spring," said Parent, "and the Chicago papers agreed that if I kept up that clip I would have to be taken from the bench. In the face of my good work I was sold away to the Baltimore team, but I will not go there."

BASEBALL LINGO PUZZLES JUDGE

NEW YORK, May 11. The testimony in the suit of John M. Ward, formerly captain of the New York Giants, against Byron Johnson, president of the American League, was a liberal education to Judge Hand. George L. Pulford, a sporting editor, testified that he had a recollection of George Davis of the "White Sox" jumping a contract.

"'Jumping,' what's that?" asked the puzzled judge. Every enthusiast in the room smiled.

"What are the White Sox?" pursued the judge. Pulford told him "The Chicago American Baseball Club," without lowering an eyelid. The Judge profited by his instruction, for subsequently he several times referred to the White Sox in his questions.

John M. Ward, the plaintiff, testified that he acted as attorney for Davis. He informed Davis, he said, that he could not be enjoined from playing with Chicago, although the binding contract of three that Davis had signed was held by New York.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

Wilbur Goode twisted his ankle in the fifth and Bill Collins took his place. You ought to have seen Bill perform. He had a couple of chances to break up the contest with a hit, but was in hard luck. However, he did more than his share by making two wonderful catches, one in the seventh and one in the tenth. He had seven chances altogether. No one could have given a more brilliant exhibition of centre fielding and it will be hard work driving him to the bench after that showing. Also, a request for waivers may be withdrawn at any moment.

Bob Keefe, Griffith's Montreal pitcher, never worked on the Boston grounds before Tuesday. He said that he and Clarke used a new system of signs. When a fast train was passing the park he pitched a fast ball and when the train was slow, he served up a slow one. His curves refused to break much because the tracks outside the yard was almost straight.

When Grant was after Sweeney's foul in the ninth, an over-enthusiastic occupant of the third base stand heaved something at him. Grant made the catch and then a cop escorted the miscreant out of the park. Johnny Bates wanted to assist the policeman, but his offer was declined.

The question arises, does Liz Beck intend to [illegible] the Columbus avenue pavement every afternoon, while the Reds are here?

COURT TO MIX IN RUSTLER FUSS

Friction between the owners of the Boston National League Club, William Hepburn Russell and L. Coues Page, who held the offices of president and vice-president respectively is disclosed. Injunction proceedings have been instituted by Mr. Page in the Superior Court.

Mr Page asks that Mr Russell be restrained from carrying out a plan to increase the number of members of the board of directors from four to five, alleging that the president would fill the additional place with a nominee of his own, and thereby obtain control of the business of the corporation to the exclusion of Mr. Page, which, the latter alleges, would be a violation of their contract that they should be equal partners.

Mr Russell claims that in order to do the business of the club systematically and expeditiously it is necessary to have an odd number of directors, and that it cannot be so conducted when there is an equal division of the votes.

Besides seeking to restrain Mr Russell from increasing the number of directors at the special meeting of the stockholders of the club, which is called for May 17, Mr Page also asks that Mr Russell be restrained from selling or transferring stock on which he has an option to purchase.

Judge Pierce issued an order of notice returnable May 15.

Russell's Side of the Story.

"I can state my position in a word," said he. "I find that in order to have a systematic and orderly administration of the affairs of the Club there should be an uneven number of members in the board of directors. I do not think it ought to be possible for Mr Page or any one individual to create a deadlock in the management by refusing to act in a matter, whether it be for the purchase of a postage stamp or something else of the greatest importance."

NO NEED OF POLICE, SAYS UMPIRE MURRAY

Umpire Murray, with the consent of President Barrow of the Eastern League has given out a statement denying that he or Umpire Pender needed any police protection at Rock Point, R. "Pender and myself walked through the crowd and no one attempted to harm us," he said. "It is not true, either, that Pender's watch and mine disagreed. It was arranged to call the game at 5 o'clock and this was done."

MEDFORD, May 11.—The repaired Tufts Aero Club glider, Tufts II, made its first trial ascents on the Tufts athletic field. The ascents which were made by the club president, Edwin P. With favorable weather conditions, daily flights will probably be attempted. The glider will give an exhibition on the morning of Junior Day, May 18.

BOUTS TO NIGHT.

K. O. Brown vs. Tommy Murphy at New York.

[illegible] at [illegible] A. C., Lawrence.

BROWN READY FOR MURPHY

NEW YORK, May 11.—Knockout Brown and Tommy Murphy, the two New York lightweights who will clash to-night in a ten-round bout at the Whirlwind A. C., Brooklyn, for the premiere lightweight honors of the metropolitan district, are in the best physical condition for the bout and there is little to choose between them.

Murphy may quit the game after tonight's fight, but he wants to leave the arena with a victory to his credit. These two men fought last Winter, when Brown won a victory on points.

Brown is signed up to meet Matt Wells, lightweight champion of England. If he defeats Wells, he will go after a finish fight with Ad Wolgast, whom he has twice bested at short distance bouts.

The men will weigh in to-night at 133 pounds. Brown will receive a $4,000 guarantee. Murphy's end is $2,000.

BONHAG AFTER MORE RUNNING TITLES

NEW YORK, May 11.—George V. Bonhag, who holds more American running records than any athlete was ever credited with, will attempt to capture another title at the games of the Irish American A. C. May 30 at Celtic Park, when he starts in the two-mile special.

In order to do this Bonhag will have to be at his best, as he will meet "Tell" Berna, present record holder and intercollegiate champion. Although Berna's indoor record of 9:11 is twelve seconds faster than Bonhag's outdoor performance, most experts argue that indoor time should be faster.

FRESHMAN CREWS IN DOUBLE SHAKE-UP

The Freshmen crews at Harvard have been pretty thoroughly shaken up within the last few days, four members of the first crew, as it has been rowing almost since the eights took to the river, having been put into the second boat, and the stroke oars having been changed. The shake-up came as a result of a two-mile race in the Charles River basin on Saturday, when a second eight defeated the first by a half length.

M'GOVERN AND COBB DRAW

BALTIMORE, May 11.—"Philly" McGovern of New York and "Ty" Cobb of Philadelphia fought ten rounds to a draw at the Washington Sporting Club to-night.

NEWPORT HAS BOXING MEET

NEWPORT, R. I., May 11.—At a boxing meeting [illegible] A. C. to-night, Harry Meyers [illegible] out Mickey Mulcahy of Worcester in the second round of a bout scheduled ten. Meyers went after Mulcahy hard in the second and put his man away with a right to the jaw.

The best bout of the evening was the six round bout between Cy Goodwin of Boston and Barney Welch of Fall River. The bout was full of action and clever work and a draw would have been a good decision.

The bout between Johnny Murphy of Newport and Kid Duran of Fort Adams was a poor one, neither man showing ability. Both were very tired at the end of the bout, which was a draw.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

ESTHER CAREY, a [illegible] whose father died when she was [illegible] and whose mother died soon after, leaving her with the care of two younger children, determined to face the world bravely, earn her own way and support the little family. They lived in Bracketsville, a New Jersey suburb of the great metropolis of New York.

She answers an advertisement and begins life as stenographer in a Wall Street [illegible] at $[illegible] a week. After a year she is raised to $[illegible] a week and succeeds in getting her sister a place at $[illegible] a week.

Things go on well, until she loses her position and then follow six black weeks of unemployment.

Finally she answers another advertisement which takes her to a Fifth avenue mansion, where Mrs. William Falsworth, prominent in civic associations and board of missions, hires her to work as an amanuensis.

At twenty-five she finds herself in charge of her own office force—with two rooms on the tenth floor of a Wall Street sky scraper. She clears net $1,200 a year.

Among her rich patrons are Senator Bellars and Mrs. Falsworth. Her work takes her often to the home of the Fifth avenue woman. She begins to find that Falsworth is not happy with his wife.

Falsworth is interested in promoting the Wildewood Mine, in the West. He meets Esther and falls in love with her. Before starting for the West one day, he says: "Esther, I want a real woman for a wife." He asks her to go away with him, but she refuses.

When he is gone Senator Bellars sends for her and dictates a letter to his nephew, Stephen Kirkland, offering him a position in New York if he will give up his [illegible] in Europe, where he is studying art, and, according to the Senator, going to the devil."

Kirkland accepts the Senator's offer and come to New York. He is a big, brown sun-burned man, with a beard and bearing every appearance of an artist.

CHAPTER V.

Steve

THE next time I saw Mr. Kirkland was when he came into my office, a few weeks later, with some work, and he stayed for a while talking to Miss Long and complimenting the view from our windows. "It would make a splendid room for a studio," he said. Mr. Kirkland smoked a long, black cigarette. I had never seen one before; they are Italian or Swiss make. After that I never saw him without one in his mouth, or his hand. Those long thin, black cigarettes are as much a part of Stephen Kirkland to me now as his thick, straight hair and his thin, brown face. He interested me as he talked there with Miss Long, though I felt it was a kind of disloyalty to know as much about him as I did—a sort of professional disloyalty. Just the same it made me feel real mad with his uncle, when I remembered what I had written about "drink and cards and women!" While I remembered these things, Mr. Kirkland was talking with Miss Long, and I noticed that he had a kind laugh, like a boy's, and was the most mannered man I ever saw—real old-fashioned polite. He spoke to my typewriter as though she were a friend of his on whom he was making a society call, holding his long cigarette in his hand and not smoking, just out of politeness. I noticed, too, that his hair was a little gray at the temples, and he was awfully slender. It was keeping on hot, and this day he had on flannel clothes and carried an old and very dirty straw hat under his arm. His shoes weren't polished like Will's.

Mr. Kirkland strolled to the big window as though there was nobody but himself in the office, and, smiling and smoking, he looked out as though he were studying the view. Then he said to me—I noticed especially it wasn't to Miss Long.

"Imperial spires and terraced roofs, broad bay and hospitable sea—what are they going to make of it all, Miss Carey?"

I told him I heard that they were going to tear down the house next to us and build an office building eighteen stories high.

"Perfectly horrible!" he exclaimed, laughing. "Too, too horrible! If they could tear us all down, now, and build us up, why, that might be worth while."

Then he went out, and Miss Long said:

"Oh, isn't he perfectly charming, Miss Carey? So handsome, and so queer! I guess he's travelled a great deal, don't you? He looks as though he spoke French."

Miss Long couldn't read his handwriting and I had to take his work home and do it myself out at Brackettsville on my other machine. It was awfully bad copy, for there were a lot of French words running through; but I had a French dictionary and looked them up, and got some right and left blanks for the others. The paper was an essay called "The Psychics of Art." Mr. Kirkland called for it next day when the girls were out for lunch, and I knew there was something wrong with him the minute he came in. He was as pale as death, and his eyes as red as his cravat.

Mr. Kirkland wasn't the first man I had come across under the influence of liquor, but the others had only disgusted me, whereas I felt sorry for this one. He was able to talk, though his voice was excited, and, as he had done before, he went over and stood in the window and began to go on about the view. Standing there, he gave me a little talk like a lecture on "The Psychics of Art." It was lovely. I understood it every bit, and I didn't dare interrupt or ask him to go because I was afraid he would change his mood and be disagreeable. It happened to be a quiet time, no one coming in, and when he had finished he went over and drank two glasses of ice-water.

"I've never had a better audience, Miss Carey, and yet I have lectured before some of the 'Faubourg' St. Germain in Paris."

I hoped he wasn't going up to his uncle like he was. It wasn't any of my business, still, somehow, I didn't want him to go, and it was a relief when he stopped on the doorsill and turned to me.

"I'd like to take a walk, and I'd like you to go with me, Maiden," he asked, just like out of a book, "will you be my staff?"

Helped Him Keep Balance

I put on my hat, and, without thinking twice, went out with Mr. Kirkland. It was the hour when the Wall Street men are at lunch, and the clerks and the girls coming in; I met several I knew, but I was a little behind Mr. Kirkland, and no one thought anything about us, anyhow. When we got into the street he led the way, and we went to the Battery.

I would rather not have gone that direction, but I didn't say anything, and when Mr. Kirkland staggered I caught his arm and gave him his balance. Then he took my arm and walked so, though I was quite a little shorter than he. Down to Castle Garden we went, just as I had gone before with Will, only it was as different as night and day. As I look back I cannot think how I ever came to go! He was talking all the time about "Madonna eyes" and stars and poetry, and he recited a verse or two every now and then. I never heard a man like this when he was intoxicated. There was nothing disgusting about it; but by the time we got down to Bowling Green Park he could hardly stand, and I made him sit down on a bench, and as I had done with Will Falsworth, I sat down by Mr. Kirkland's side. He had a beautiful smile. It was really the best of the good-looking things about him. Then he said to me:

"Were these the ways of life to thee
That led thee from the fragrant dell..?"

He asked me this question so many times that I learned the two lines by heart.

"There's a very good idea for a poem there," he stammered. "I shall call you Penelope. You seem to me to have been formed to sit and spin—to weave and spin against fate."

He asked me if I knew anything about Penelope.

"I shall give you the Odyssey to-morrow. To-morrow—and to-morrow—and to-morrow."

After a little I saw that he was going to sleep. I kept thinking all the time of Senator Bellars and of his letter to Mr. Kirkland, and what the result would be if he should see his nephew in this state. I felt awfully sorry for him. It was dreadfully hot, but our seat was in the shade. When he couldn't sit up any longer he leaned on my shoulder and I let him, and when he had gone off sound asleep I made him as comfortable as I could and held the umbrella over him for a long time. No one bothered us. It's funny how little any one matters to the folks around unless they give trouble! I couldn't help but smile when I thought how different this spree of mine was from the other. Mr. Falsworth seemed so strong and Mr. Kirkland seemed so weak.

Will had written me two or three times a day ever since he left New York and sent me a pile of telegrams. Of course, I hadn't written one word to him.

I didn't mean that Mr. Kirkland should wake up and find me there, for I was sure he would rouse sober and be able to look after himself. So I got him finally laid down on the bench and covered his face with his hat, and then went away and sat over where it was easy to see him wake up, which he did about four o'clock, dazed and looking all around in surprise, and stretching out his arms. He was all right, that was plain, and I got a sandwich and a glass of milk in the German restaurant, and returned to the office in time to close up.

When the Seer Parted the Curtains of the Future

BY KENNETT HARRIS.

AS they turned the corner of the street, Murree stopped short and dragged Grace to a standstill also. "Honust, I'm afraid," said Murree.

"Aw! c'mon," tittered the other girl. "There ain't nothing to be afraid of. All of the girls has be'n, don't I tell you, and there ain't nothing happened to them."

"But I don't believe it anyway. What's the use of going? If she did tell me anything, I wouldn't believe she knew any more about it than I do."

"You're the limit!" exclaimed Grace. "Ain't I told you what she told me, and didn't Ireen tell you what she told her? Anyway, it won't cost you but fifty cents to find out.

"Listen! You don't need to tell her who you are, nor anything else. I didn't tell her that you was coming this afternoon and she's never seen you. Now you go right along and I'll wait in the drug store for you."

She gave Murree a little push, disengaging herself at the same time, and hurried across the street.

Murree went right along.

* * * * * * *

At the foot of the worn stone steps that led to the front door Murree hesitated again.

It was almost a physical necessity, for her heart was beating so fast that the ascent seemed formidable of itself.

It was broad daylight—as broad as the daylight ever gets in that part of the city—and every doorway had its reassuring loungers.

Children played on the sidewalks and at the curb edge and cars went rocking and thumping by, threatening them with instant annihilation; there was even a policeman making his way to the patrol box, with his key ready in his hand, but Murree was afraid.

The house itself with its down-slatted green shutters and mildewed brick had an air of impenetrable mystery, and then there was the awful name of the seeress on the tarnished zinc plate:

SARVARKAR

Murree grasped the railing drew a deep breath and went up the steps and lo! without human agency, the door opened before her. She entered and the door closed behind her.

* * * * * * *

"Trances is necessary in some cases," said Sarvarkar, fixing her dark, inscrutable eyes upon the girl, "but I never do it under a dollar. Still," she added encouragingly, "it ain't necessary in your case. You're real sympathetic, and sympathetic persons become en rapport with the spirit influences right away. Ask me your questions—Murree."

Murree started and began to tremble. Here was instant proof of the super natural power of the medium. How could she know that her name was Murree?

"What would you know, Murree Webster?" repeated Sarvarkar in full rich tones.

Murree continued to tremble, and blushed to the roots of her yellow hair. She tried to speak, but her tongue refused to articulate. The medium passed a plump hand wearily across her brow and her eyelids drooped. Then she sighed. "It comes to me," she murmured. "You want to know about D.—D. C."

"Danny!" gasped Murree, below her breath. "Oh!" Her blush deepened.

Sarvarkar's eyes were nearly closed now. "Them is the initials that comes to me," she said. "He is—yes, he is blond and big. He loves, but he has not spoken of his love. He is poor, and he will be rich some day, but he has enemies that he must beware of. One is near to him now. I see—now it is all dim again."

Murree bent forward, her lips parted and her eyes shining. "I know," she said. "It's that skate"—— She checked herself.

"There is a dark girl," pursued Sarvarkar. "He must beware of her, but his heart is true and she will be foiled."

"Adleen," whispered Murree, clenching her little fists. Then she breathed her relief.

"The girl he loves is a blonde, too," Sarvarkar went on. "She is a working girl and her father is sick. She has two sisters and they both have to work. It is often a struggle to make ends meets, but there is brighter days coming."

Murree was clasping and unclasping her hands in her agitation.

As the medium again paused she found that she could speak. "Will Dan—will D. C. tell—the girl—the blonde girl—that he—he loves her?"

If Sarvarker's eyes had not been nearly closed she must have seen that Murree was overcome by the awful realization of what she had asked. But her eyes were very nearly closed.

"He will," she answered.

"Soon?" asked Murree, boldly.

"Before three weeks are over," replied Sarvarkar. Then she unclosed her eyes and started in astonishment.

"I guess I must have been pretty near in a trance," she said, briskly. "By rights you ought to pay another fifty cents. Well, I hope you got your money's worth, anyway."

"Indeed I did," said Murree fervently.

"Come again, muh dear," said Sarvarkar, quite cordially. "I might have something more to tell you another time."

* * * * * * *

"Well?" said Grace, as Murree slipped into a chair beside her.

"Ain't it wonderful?" gasped Muree.

"Didn't I tell you? You ain't been long about it, anyway. I've just finished a cream soda and that's all. How pale you are! What did she tell you?"

"All sorts of things."

"Anything about Danny?"

Murree nodded and blushed. "How can they tell such things? Don't you believe it's wrong? And, listen, Grace. Ain't that picnic two weeks from next Choosdy?"

"Sure," answered Grace. "Why?"

But Murea didn't tell her.

Why the New Lodger Moved

"I THINK," said the new lodger, who had spent the night under Mrs. Whipperman's roof, "that I'll pack my goods and chattels and look around for a room in some neighborhood where the people are not given to the strenuous life.

"I felt sure, Mrs. Whipperman, when you showed me that delightful room, that I had found just what I wanted—a haven of rest where a tired soul might find repose.

"I went to that room last evening and sat down by the window to read a work on political economy by Adam Smith. Have you read his admirable works? If not, you should do so and cut out the trashy novels of Mrs. Georgie Sheldon and Bertha M. Clay.

"The women of this country are entirely too fond of reading trashy books which introduces heroes with sombre eyes and tawny mustaches and villains who his things through their clenched teeth.

"But, as I was saying, I sat down by the window to read my Adam Smith and was lost in admiration of an excellent passage touching the mismanagement of municipal government, when a brick came through the casement and knocked the book out of my hands and ruined one of my fingers.

The Beauties of Adam Smith

"Investigation showed that some boys were playing in the alley under my window and threw the brick without malice. I dismissed the matter from my mind, for I like children to have plenty of fun, and began reading again.

"A marvelous man was that Adam Smith, my dear Mrs. Whipperman! His grasp of difficult subjects was simply remarkable! How any woman can sit down and read the trifling stories of Mrs. Southworth or Mrs. Holmes, when she can get Adam Smith by going to the public library, passes my comprehension.

"But, as I was saying, I had just resumed my reading when somebody discharged a shotgun in the neighborhood and two or three pounds of birdshot came in my window and disturbed me greatly.

"Fortunately the force of the shot was nearly spent and I did not suffer severe injuries, but I had to pick the birdshot out of my neck with a pair of tweezers, and it was decidedly annoying.

"When a man is reading a really useful and helpful book he has no patience with such interruptions.

"I have been informed that the man who used the gun was merely shooting at a stray cat, and I do not criticise his conduct in the least, but he should take lessons in marksmanship.

Settling an Argument

"I took up that treasured volume once more, Mrs. Whipperman, and turned to a chapter dealing with the psychological problems which engaged the great minds of a century ago.

"Whenever I paused in my reading I couldn't help wondering why elderly ladies who are supposed to have normal intelligence waste their time reading the absurd productions of such writers as Marie Corelli, when they might enjoy the stately diction and profound arguments of Adam Smith.

"I was still meditating upon this problem when a stream of water came through the window and saturated me and my book and everything in the room. I discovered afterward that a couple of neighbors across the alley became engaged in an interesting argument as to the water pressure in this part of town, and in order to decide the matter they attached some hose to a hydrant and turned the water on.

"I'm always glad to see my neighbors eager and earnest in the pursuit of knowledge, but I have always held that people shouldn't squirt water without figuring out who is going to be drowned.

"There were other interruptions, each trifling in itself, but quite annoying in the aggregate. Bottle and dead cats and other articles of vertu came through the window at intervals, and I found it impossible to read with any degree of comfort.

"So I have concluded to hunt new lodging.

"If I may offer you a parting word of advice, Mrs. Whipperman, it is that you secure at once the complete works of Adam Smith and forsake the demoralising practice of reading 'Nick Carter' and 'Old Sleuth.'"

Peace.

FAR from the noisy street
Worn smooth by restless feet
I stand and listen.

Hear but the bell of deer
Or call of curlew clear
From her nest risen.

See boulders gray, in fern,
Left by the glacier stern,
Moulded and riven.

Which is the nobler life
Here, or in noisy strife?
Answer, O heaven!

Forward, and soon you will
Hear the words "Peace be still"
To your doubts given.

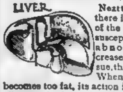
DANGERS OF FAT
HOW FAT AFFECTS THE LIVER



Next to the heart, there is no organ of the body more susceptible to an abnormal increase of fatty tissue, than the liver. When the liver becomes too fat, its action is impeded, allowing the fat-making foods to make more fat than is needed for normal symmetry. The liver, clogged with excess fat, becomes inactive, and, from disease, the nature of the organ undergoes a change. Constipation, headaches, biliousness and similar local disturbances of the system are not the least of the fat man or woman's troubles, for the rolls and layers of fat on all portions of the body increase, clogging other organs, paving the way to obesity. All this can be avoided, if the proper remedy is resorted to at once. Nothing ever discovered for the removal of fat is so effective as the famous Marmola Prescription. However, from the same high authority came Marmola Prescription Tablets, containing all the elements of this sure, harmless Prescription and offering a more convenient means for reducing to normal weight at the rate of 10 to 16 oz. a day, without dieting, exercise or resulting wrinkles and flabbiness. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or the Marmola Co., 75 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at 75c the case.

Why Other Vacuum Cleaning Systems Infringe

It needs neither a lawyer nor an engineer to interpret the basic Kenney Vacuum Cleaning Patent. For the patent itself is as clear and as terse as English can be made.

It reads:

"In a suction cleaning apparatus, the combination of —a suction nozzle, adapted to be moved over the surface to which it is applied for cleaning, and having a narrow inlet slot,
—a suction creating device capable of maintaining a sufficient vacuum,
—and impurities collecting means, between the nozzle and the suction creating device, and suitably connected therewith for removing impurities from the air."

We claim no patent on vacuum or suction; but to use vacuum as a practical cleaning agent, there must be a slotted tool; there must be some method of separating the dust from the air.

And the combination of these elements is the basic Kenney Patent.

"RICHMOND"

"Collect the Dust—Don't Spread It"

"RICHMOND" Vacuum Cleaning embraces every provedly successful principle known to the art as developed by Kenney, the Father of Vacuum Cleaning, and other foremost inventors. It is manufactured under the protection of the Kenney Basic Patent, and 84 other patents. It includes machines of all forms and types of construction. It offers a full line from which to select—each model being particularly suited to some specific requirement. The trademark "RICHMOND" stands for the best of all that has been learned in the art of vacuum cleaning.

There are special "RICHMOND" Systems designed especially for residences, apartments, hotels, schools, office buildings, libraries, churches, theatres, factories, stores, garages, and public buildings. "RICHMOND" Vacuum Cleaning will easily earn its own way, to say nothing of the cleanliness and convenience it brings.

It can readily be installed in old buildings as well as in new.

The actual saving soon provides full reimbursement of the original investment.

Desperate Desmond

YOU CUR!
THE HOT LAVA FROM THIS VOLCANO WILL SOON ENGULF YOUR LOVER CLAUDE AND THEN YOU WILL BE MINE ROSAMOND. HA, HA, HA!
I DEFY YOU DESMOND
A QUAKE! THE EARTH IS CRACKING RUN FAST ROSAMOND.
THE LAVA IS RUNNING DOWN THE CREVICE. LUCKY THE BOULDER IS KEEPING THE EARTH FROM CLOSING DESMOND IS CAUGHT
AT LAST VILLAIN WE ARE FACE TO FACE!
I'LL FOIL YOU AND THE SAILORS YET!
YOU AND THE EARTHQUAKE SAVED MY LIFE. MEN, THE NAVY WILL TEND TO THE VILLAIN DESMOND'S CASE

Pipe the grim, sardonic laugh on the villain. He thinks he has got our brave hero dead to rights this time. With Claude out of the way, he believes it will be an easy matter to force Rosamond to marry him. He may find that it's not such a cinch after all. The girl has a will of her own and will never marry a man she cannot respect.

At this thrilling moment the earth suddenly begins to tremble like a man with the ague, the only difference being that quinine is of no avail to stop this kind of a shake. After a few preliminary rumblings a wide crevice is opened in the hitherto solid earth, and both Claude and Desmond are swallowed up. But Rosamond escapes.

Now, if the earthquake had gobbled up Desmond alone, nobody would have had any kick coming—that is to say, nobody but the villain himself, and no decent person cares whether he is satisfied or not. But why should a brave young hero like Claude Eclaire be buried alive in the same grave with a cur like Desperate Desmond?

One moment, gentle reader. Things are not as bad as they appeared to be at first glance. A huge rock has wedged itself into the crevice, thus preventing the earth from closing up on our noble hero. Moreover, the lava stream has taken a tumble into the yawning chasm, and Claude has nothing to fear from that quarter.

To be sure, Desmond's life has been saved also, but that will be all right. Here comes Rosamond with the sailors from the American fleet, and you may be sure they are determined not to let the villain get away from them a second time. You can fool anybody once, but it takes a clever man to work the same game twice.

The sailors are taking Desmond back to the flagship to get instructions from the Admiral as to what particular form of punishment he is to receive. We sincerely hope and trust that the Admiral will hand it to the villain good and hard. Then Claude and Rosamond can be married by the fleet chaplain, possibly in tomorrow's pictures.

The Romance of a Millionaire and a Beautiful French Singer

THE DE BERCY AFFAIR

A Fascinating Mystery Story by Gordon Holmes. Copyright, 1910, by E. J. Clode

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

MADEMOISELLE DE BERCY, a favorite of the stage, who came to London recently from her triumphs in Paris and won her way into the best circles in the fashionable West End, is found shockingly murdered in her luxurious apartments at the Feldisham Mansions.

All London is mystified by the crime and interest is lent to the affair by the fact that Rupert Osborne, a rich young member of the American colony, who believed her story that she came of noble French lineage, was about to marry Mlle. de Bercy. He was known to have called upon her late in the afternoon, a short time before she was found lifeless in her room.

Chief Inspector Winter, of Scotland Yard, learns, however, that Osborne has established a complete alibi.

Winter learns that Mademoiselle de Bercy is really Mirabel Armand, the daughter of a peasant in Jersey.

Furneaux, the best detective on Winter's staff, is unaccountably absent, and the case is given into the hands of Detective Clarke, who has discovered a taxicab driver who says he took a man closely resembling Osborne to Miss de Bercy's apartments about 7:30 o'clock on the night of the murder.

Winter takes the case out of Clarke's hands and goes to Feldishham Mansions himself, only to find Furneaux in possession of the place, and strangely agitated. He admits he knew Rose de Bercy, as Mirabel Armand, in Jersey, years ago. He is unusually uncommunicative and his manner puzzles his chief.

Clarke has found a prehistoric axe-head, with which the woman's face was mutilated, but Furneaux declares the death wound was dealt with a dagger-like weapon through the right eye. He is not enthusiastic in the belief that Osborne committed the crime.

To get rid of Clarke, Winter assigns him to watch two Anarchists, Janoc and Descartes.

Meanwhile, London looks upon Osborne as the criminal. Rose de Bercy is believed to have been an adventuress of whom he wished to be rid.

A strange phase of the case is the report that Mlle. de Bercy was in some way or other connected with the Anarchist Society of France.

Winter calls on Osborne and learns that the latter knew little or nothing of Mlle. de Bercy's past life. He tells Osborne he believes him innocent of the crime.

Winter warns Osborne not to go to the funeral, but to leave London and hide himself away in some small seaside town. He tells Osborne that public feeling is high, and he is generally believed to be the murderer.

Winter leaves Osborne feeling strangely troubled about Furneaux. Ugly suspicions are beginning to arise in his mind.

Osborne starts for the station and on his way sees two Anarchists being deported by the police.

THE ironic phrase was pitiless. It denounced, condemned, explained. Rupert forced a laugh.

"Truly, money can do almost anything," he said.

A detective came out of the passage, laden with dilapidated packages. The woman smiled broadly, saying:

"My faith, they do not prosper, those Anarchists."

Rupert edged his way through the crowd. On the opposite side of the street the contents bills of the early editions of the evening newspapers glared at him: "West End murder—Relatives sail from Jersey." "Portrait sketch of Osborne"; "Paris Life of Rose de Bercy"; the horror of it all suddenly stifled his finer impulses: from that hour Rupert squared his shoulders and meant to scowl at the jeering multitude.

Probably because he was very rich, he cultivated tastes in the matter of food. At one o'clock he ate some fruit and a cake or two, drank a glass of milk, and noticed that the girl in the cashier's desk was actually looking at his own "portrait sketch" when he tendered her a shilling. About half-past one he took a hansom to Waterloo Station, where he bought a map and railway guide at the bookstall, and soon decided that Tormouth on the coast of Dorset offered some prospect of a quiet anchorage.

So, when Jenkins came with a couple of new leather bags, Rupert bought a third-class ticket. Traveling in a corridor compartment, he heard the Feldisham mansions crime discussed twice during the afternoon. Once he was described as a "reel bad one—one of them fellers 'oo 'nd too little to do an' too much to do it on." When, at Winchester, these critics alighted, their places were taken by a couple of young women; and the train had hardly started again before the prettier of the two called her companion's attention to a page in an illustrated paper.

"Poor thing! Wasn't she a beauty?" she asked, pointing to a print of the Academy portrait of Mademoiselle de Bercy.

"You can never tell—them photographs are so touched up," was the reply.

"There's no touching up of Osborne, is there?" cried the other, looking at the motor-car photograph.

"No, indeed. He looks as if he had just done it," said the friend.

On Lonely Path

A lumbering omnibus took him to Tormouth. At the Swan Hotel he haggled about the terms, and chose a room at ten shillings per diem instead of the plutocratic apartment first offered at twelve and six. In the register he signed "R. Glyn, London," and at once wrote to Winter. He almost laughed when he found that Jenkins's address on the label was some street in North London, where that excellent man's sister dwelt.

He found that Tormouth possessed one great merit—an abundance of sea air. It was a quiet, old place, a town of another century, cut off from the rush of modern life by the frenzied opposition to railways displayed by its local magnates fifty years earlier. Rupert could not have selected a better retreat. He dined, slept, ate three hearty meals next day, and slept again with a soundness that argued him free from care.

But newspapers reached even Tormouth, and, on the second morning after his arrival, Osborne's bitter mood returned when he read an account of Rose de Bercy's funeral. The crowds anticipated by Winter were there, the reporters duly chronicled Rupert's absence, and there could be no gainsaying the eagerness of the press to drag in his name on the slightest pretext.

But the arrows of outrageous fortune seemed to be less barbed when he found himself on a lonely path that led westward along the cliffs, and his eyes dwelt on the far-flung loveliness of a sapphire sea reflecting the tint of a turquoise sky.

A pleasant breeze that just sufficed to chisel the surface of the water into tiny facets flowed lazily from the South. From the beach, some twenty feet or less beneath the low cliff, came the murmur of a listless tide. On the swelling uplands of Dorset shone glorious patches of gold and green, with here and there a hamlet or many ricked farm, while in front, a mile away, the cliff climbed with a gentle curve to a fine headland that jutted out from the shore-line like some great pier built by a genie for the caravels of giants. It was a morning to dispel shadows, and the cloud lifted from Rupert's heart under its cheery influence. He stopped to light a cigar, and from that moment Rupert's regeneration was complete.

"It is a shame to defile this wonderful atmosphere with tobacco smoke," he mused, "so I must salve my conscience by burning incense to the spirit of the place. That sort of spirit is invariably of the female gender. Where is the lady? Invisible, of course."

Without the least expectation of discovering either fay or mortal on the yellow sands that spread their broad highway between sea and cliff, Rupert stepped off the path on to the narrow strip of turf that separated it from the edge and looked down at the beach. Greatly to his surprise, a girl sat there, painting. She had rigged a big Japanese umbrella to shield herself and her easel from the sun. Its green-hued paper cover, gay with pink dragons and blue butterflies, brought a startling note of color into the placid foreground. The girl, or young woman, wore a very smart hat, but her dress was a grayish brown costume, sufficiently indeterminate in tint to conceal the stains of rough usage in climbing over rocks, or forcing a way through rank vegetation. Indeed, it was chosen, in the first instance, so that a dropped brush or a blob of paint would not show too vivid traces; and this was well, for some telepathic action caused the wearer to lift her eyes to the cliff the very instant after Rupert's figure broke the sky-line above the long grasses nodding on the verge. The result was lamentable. She squeezed half a tube of crimson lake over her skirt in a movement of surprise at the apparition.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Manicure Lady

She Tells of Brother Wilfred's Scheme to Pick Up a Little Easy Money.

"I WAS talking to a vaudeville star this morning, George," said the Manicure Lady. "He was that down in the mouth that I thought, when he went out, he was likely to wait for a rainy day and stretch a length of clothes line. He sure looked, talked and acted indigo blue."

"Lost his grip?" asked the Head Barber.

"No, he ain't lost his grip," said the Manicure Lady. "He is one of the cleverest boys that ever walked out to face an audience, and he is right in his prime now. Along he comes with a brand new sketch, for which he paid five hundred cold dollars, and, believe me, George, it is a cutey.

"But when he starts out to get his bookings—what a chance! Why, George, that boy, with all his record and all his ability, gets turndown after turndown.

"Three of the people connected with the big time offered him a few weeks, but they wanted to make him a price of five hundred a week for the sketch, and it was only one season at that. He was getting eight hundred working alone. Five hundred for this sketch would leave him about two hundred for himself, and he's too proud to stand for it."

"What's the matter with the show business, anyhow?" asked the Head Barber.

She Can't "Dope It Out"

"I don't know, and can't dope it out," said the Manicure Lady. "This young fellow, I am telling you about, was kind of bitter. Of course, he talked frank to me, because I have knew him and his little wife for six years, and believe me, George, they are bred in the purple. Class all through, both of 'em.

"'It's kind of tough, pal,' he says to me. 'Just after I get that five hundred dollar offer for my sketch, I drop into a vaudeville house and see a young kid named Knockout Brown. He is nineteen years old physically, and about ten otherwise, and he is grabbing one thousand dollars a week because he found out that he had a harder punch in his left hand than the rest of the aspiring lightweights.

"'Think of it, pal!' he goes on. 'A boy that couldn't earn twenty-five dollars a week in any other line, getting one thousand dollars a week, while men that has given their brains and their best years to the producing of really high-class vaudeville acts, men lots better and brainier than I am, get offers that seem like starvation wages by comparison.

"'I got nothing against this little lightweight,' he explains to me. 'I wish he could make a million. But I guess the way things look now, I'll get out of the show business for good and all.'"

"Jack Johnson got fifteen hundred a week until he did his little bit in a California jail," said the Head Barber. "It doesn't seem right, when you stop to think of it. They say Nat Wills gets eight hundred a week, and I always figured he was worth it with all his stage experience. He's always sure fire, too. Think of that big smoke getting almost twice as much! I can't dope it out."

Brother Wilfred's Scheme

"Brother Wilfred was talking about it up to the house last night," said the Manicure Lady. "He has a great scheme for grabbing a little easy money. He is thinking of laying some night for Packey McFarland and picking a fake fight with him. He used to know Packey out in Chicago, and he says they are great pals.

"He was sure, when he told me the scheme last night, that Packey would let him put in a knockout blow, right out on the street somewhere, and then Packey's conqueror, meaning my dear brother, could get a week in vaudeville for say a thousand beans.

"The old gent is heartily in favor of the scheme, because Wilfred owes a lot of back board home, but I don't think much of it."

"Neither do I," said the Head Barber. "And I don't think Packey would, either."

How She Got Rid of Him

"I HAVE here," said the agent, "a combined washing machine and wringer"——

"Well, I don't want any such contraption," interrupted Mrs. Curfew. "I have a combined washing machine and wringer of my own, and if you will look in the woodshed there you will see it, where the neighbors' children have been playing horse with it.

"That machine was sold to me three or four months ago by your twin brother, or a man who looked enough like you to be your twin brother, only he had an impediment in his hearing, and it was painful the way I had to yell at him to make him understand, and I'm sure everybody within five miles must have known that I was buying a combined washing machine and wringer, with an attachment for milking cows.

"I don't understand why nearly all the agents who come here have infirmities of one kind or another. One is so deaf that you can't understand what he says, and another's eyes are so poor that he can't hear a word you say, and still another is so bald that he hasn't a tooth in his head, and a woman feels as if she were conversing with the freaks in a dime musee, though goodness knows the freaks don't try to sell you things you don't want.

"Now, mister, I want to sell you that combined washing machine and wringer that's out there in the woodshed. Turn about is fair play, as the arithmetic says, and it seems to me that I have as much right to sell things as anybody else.

She Turns Salesman

"That washing machine you have with you isn't to be compared with mine, and you'll admit it, if you are an honorable man, which I suppose you are, although I think it a shame for a man to go around without blacking his shoes or shining his teeth, when he expects to converse with ladies.

"Now, you come right along to the woodshed and look at my combined washing machine and wringer, and if you want to buy it I'll take yours in part payment, which is fair enough for anybody, and more than any agent was ever willing to do for me.

"My washing machine and ironer is as good as it was the day I bought it, and I think a great deal of it, but my husband has bought a patent revolving churn and, of course, since that was put into the house we have no use for a washing machine and so I am willing to sell it at a sacrifice.

"The beauty of this machine is that it wasn't invented by the court physician of the Emperor of Germany and had no miraculous origin. It wasn't found by a British officer at the siege of Sebastopol and the plans weren't obtained from a nobleman in reduced circumstances.

It Had Recommendations

"The agent I bought this machine from insisted that it wasn't made of herbs or barks or buds and that fact alone ought to be sufficient recommendation.

"If you were a woman, keeping house on a public highway, with agents coming to your door every half hour, trying to sell you furniture polish and cough syrup and such things, all made of herbs and barks and buds, or discovered by some world renowned scientist or revealed in dreams, I'm sure you'd appreciate such a combined washing machine and wringer, with its attachments for grinding coffee and driving the cows out of the garden, and it wouldn't be necessary for me to be standing here arguing by the hour.

"I don't want to say anything to hurt your feelings, mister, but you look as though you needed a washing machine the worst way.

"You have the appearance of a man who has been mislaid in the ash barrel for several days and it would do you good and improve your standing in society. I'm sure, if you'd run yourself through such a combined washing machine and wringer as mine, which, as I said before, has no herbs or buds among its ingredients and which never was operated before the crowned heads of Europe.

"So you won't buy my splendid combined washing machine and wringer? Well, then, run along and after this I hope you'll know better than to interrupt a woman when she's busy with her housework, trying to sell her a combined something or other that was invented by a British nobleman in distress."

Home and Home-Made Bread

By WINIFRED BLACK.

"HOME-MADE bread must go," says a writer in one of the great magazines.

"It isn't as good as baker's bread; it isn't as wholesome, and counting the waste of time and the use of material and the use of patience and skill by the woman who bakes it—it is more expensive than bakers' bread. Home-made bread must go."

Well—I suppose it must—just as a good deal of home-made happiness seems to be going, too. We used to have a whole lot of fun right at home—fun we couldn't have anywhere else on earth. Have you forgotten the long Winter evenings with the new books and the reading lamp and the big dish of fresh popcorn, and the basket of apples, and maybe a plate of doughnuts along with them?

The fire blazed on the hearth, father read the paper, mother read her book, and the children squabbled and laughed and popped corn, and ate apples and named them, and counted the seeds and peeled them, and threw the peelings over their shoulders to find out the initials of their sweethearts' names, and the old dog got as close to the fire as the cat would let him, and the wind sang in the chimney—and we were all together, together, at home.

Not "together" in a flat with a phonograph yelling a coon song on one side of us, and the family upstairs quarreling over whose turn it is to go to the picture show, and the family downstairs trying to decide whether they'd better go down to the vaudeville performance or have real ham and eggs for breakfast in the morning.

Home, real home, with a real mother in it.

And the Summer evenings! They were never long enough, long as they were. They began at sunset, and by the time dinner was over all the family were out on the porch, and there was quite a rivalry as to who should first see the evening star.

How mysterious it was, that silver evening star, set in the blue of the early evening sky; and then the others began to appear twinkle, twinkle, sparkle; some one was very busy lighting the soft lamps of heaven.

And then the moon. We knew something about the moon in those days. Why, you could tell what month it was and what time of the month without ever glancing at an almanac, or a calendar either, just by the looks of the moon. So silver sweet in May, so softly primrose hued in June, so richly yellow in July, and red as an Autumn leaf in fair September.

And the tall phlox—how sweet they were in the early dews of evening. Pop, pop—the yellow primrose—the kind that grew on a high straight stalk with a leaf like a mullein; you could hear it popping open when the moon began to shine upon it. And the old songs we sang together on the old porch in the moonlight, and the friendly neighbors who dropped in to sit with us and gossip in kindly fashion.

Home, a real home, with a real mother and a real father and real children in it. Home with home-made bread in the pantry, and home-made cookies in the jar, and home-made ginger cake in the cake box, good and rich with plenty of butter and black molasses in it, not mean little stingy slices bought at some cheap baker's, but great, honest brown loaves of it. And pitchers of buttermilk to wash it down with, and nobody surprised if you went to the pantry for a bite any time of the day or night. Layer cake, too, not from the baker, from the oven at home. Rich and sweet and delicate—there isn't a baker in the world that could bake a cake like that to save his life.

Soft rising bread, too—how about a slice of it now with a good comb of honey on a glass dish and a silver cup of cold milk? Time wasted baking bread, is it, Mr. Magazine writer? Dear me; I suppose it is.

Just think of the time we wasted getting acquainted with each other in the old days of the real homes—time when we could have been at the moving picture show or at the latest thing in vaudeville.

Time wasted? Why, yes; I suppose mother, who baked the bread, could have played half a dozen games of bridge while she was doing it—if she'd only known it.

Poor mother—what a lot she did miss, didn't she? Bridge and automobiling and morning concerts and Ibsen Talks and the "Earnest Mother" discussions, day in and day out, while she was staying at home, baking loaves of honest, wholesome, nourishing bread for her brood of youngsters. Poor mother—I'm sorry for her.

And yet?

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

In almost every neighborhood you will find women who have been restored to health by the Pinkham medicines. Inquire among them and see. Many would not have a testimonial published, but would talk about their cure to another woman. m

Splendid Spring Tonic At Small Cost

(From Martyn's Drug Journal)

As millions of bottles of various blood medicines and liver regulators are taken yearly to tone up the blood, restore vitality and healthy conditions to the body, it will not be amiss for us to repeat the formula of an old-time remedy that has been used with marvelous success.

Dissolve one ounce of kardene in one-half pint alcohol, then add one-half cup sugar and enough hot water to make a quart. The ingredients can be had at any drug store at small cost. One tablespoonful of this tonic taken before each meal will soon correct all disorders of the liver, make the blood clear, and strengthen and build up the system most satisfactorily. For correcting sallow, pimply complexions; and giving one vigor and good health, we have never found a remedy to equal it.

Creamed Asparagus

Asparagus is just now in season. Creamed Asparagus and Asparagus Soup are favorite ways of preparing it. In both cases use Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk for richness and fine flavor.

RECIPE

Take one bunch of asparagus and cook in boiling salted water till tender. Melt two tablespoonfuls butter, add two tablespoonfuls flour, and mix until smooth; add a pinch of salt, a little pepper and three-fourths cup Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk and one and one-fourth cups water, stirring continually until it boils. WHITING CASE STIRS MELROSE

Its demand for an explanation of the forced resignation of William C. Whiting as principal of the Melrose High School having been refused by the School Board of that city, the committee of five citizens appointed at a mass meeting, is planning legal steps to compel the Melrose Board of Aldermen to take up the case.

The citizens committee, which is composed of Charles C. Barry, Charles H. Adams, Addison L. Winship, George H. Hill and George P. Farnham, feels it has been flouted by the School Board. The answer of Chairman Edwin S. Small to a request for information as to the reason for Principal Whiting's resignation was to refer the questioners to Mr. Whiting. The deposed principal said:

"I know of no reason why I should be asked to resign, although I have complied. I may find out the reason in a few days."

Under the rules of the School Board, Mr. Whiting could have demanded a hearing, but this he did not do.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT 'WORLD' SHOW

To-day's program at the "World in Boston" included addresses by the Rev. Dr. Robert Forbes of Philadelphia, Colonel Elijah W. Halford of New York and Edward P. St. John. There was a large attendance.

The attendance at the "Pageant of Darkness and Light" last night was so large that some of the people had to be sent up into the second balcony, which is not generally used.

Visitors to "The World in Boston" have been particularly impressed by the magnificent color and variety of the lighting effects in the "Pageant of Darkness and Light." George Pickett, the master of the Pageant, is responsible for producing these effects.

In carrying out his ideas he had the services of a mechanical expert, P. Sibila, master electrician of the Boston Opera House.

In the episode of the North a brilliant "aurora borealis" is shown, apparently helping a great deal to make this scene convincing. In the episode of the South an African sunset lights the stage, emphasizing in its dull glow the black faces of the slaves.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCK MARKET TONE IS WEAK

NEW YORK, May 11.—Conspicuous weakness shown by Interboro-Metropolitan and heaviness in Canadian Pacific were the features of the stock market, which opened to-day dull and irregular and with scattered selling. Interborough-Metropolitan opened with a decline of 1½ points, due to the subway situation in New York, which indicated that this corporation would fail to get contracts for the city for the building of new underground lines.

An absence of buying orders, said by traders to have resulted from the Canadian reciprocity outlook, caused a heavy tone in Canadian Pacific. The belief also prevailed that bulls had overstayed the market in this issue.

Probability that the United States Supreme Court would hand down the bill anti-trust case decisions on Monday also cast a shadow over the market.

Although comment on United States Steel was unfavorable, this stock showed unexpected strength. It opened unchanged from last night's close.

Many of the railroad shares were off. Lehigh Valley declined ¼, Reading ⅛, Pennsylvania ⅛ and Atchison ⅛. Northern Pacific was up ⅛ and Union Pacific opened unchanged.

The curb market opened quiet and irregular. Americans in the London market showed hesitancy and narrow trading. This sentiment was reflected in Canadian Pacific, which reacted after an advance.

8 ELECTRIC ENGINES FOR HOOSAC TUNNEL

Eight powerful electric locomotives, each capable of hauling a train of 2,000 tons, have been ordered for service through the Hoosac Tunnel as a part of the huge electrification plan for the western end of the Boston & Maine road, which goes into effect June 1. Each locomotive will weigh 250,000 pounds. The present average weight of freight trains is 1,250 tons. Besides the increase in the capacity of the average train, the greater speed of the electric engines will increase the tunnel's car capacity per month from 50,000 cars to 80,000.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The financial district considered that the most important statement in the various speeches made public in connection with the Gary dinner to the Iron & Steel Institute was the announcement by President Farrell of the United States Steel Corporation that Canadian steel companies are working full capacity, and even then are unable to supply the demand in that country for steel products. The possibilities of business with Canada are great, but as Canada charges an import duty on steel about equal to that charged by the United States, there is little chance of much improvement in that direction unless closer business relations are established with the Dominion. Reciprocity, however, has many bitter enemies in high finance and the prevailing opinion in the financial world is that it will fail at Washington, as well as at Ottawa.

A rumor affecting Erie has been proven to have some foundation. The rumor is to the effect that the Armours, of Chicago, are negotiating for the grain elevator in Jersey City now operated by the Erie. Investigation proved that negotiations are under way, Erie desiring to be relieved of the operation perhaps because it may conflict with certain interstate commerce regulations. The deal, however, has not been concluded. Should the Armours acquire the elevator it would be taken to mean that they are interested in Erie stock, and will use the road for a larger proportion of their grain and meat shipments than in the past. The old rumor that Canadian Pacific is buying an interest in Erie is also in circulation, but it is more likely that Canadian Northern will be the buyer.

High-grade short term notes continue to sell at high prices, dealers being unable to supply the demand. Second-grade issues are in fair demand, but orders for them are not as great as they have been. Supplies of first-class notes have been depleted and there is no prospect of any new issues in the immediate future. Owing to the good buying of long-term bonds, dealers in short-term notes had expected the railroads to take advantage of the favorable opportunity presented to float additional issues of bonds to take up some of the notes issued earlier in the year, but as yet there is no definite instance of such a move.

Because of the seemingly insatiable demand for them, equipment bonds are now selling at the highest prices since July, 1907. Dealers say they are unable to satisfy the demand because of the steady absorption which has been going on since the latter part of last year. Second-grade notes, that is, issues yielding about five per cent. on the investment, are in good demand. Equipment bonds are issued in series maturing every six months. This will further deplete the supply available. Investors have been influenced by the bad reports of business and are cautious and conservative in their purchases. Equipment bonds are considered by some bankers to be safer than first mortgage securities, as, according to a decision handed down some time ago by the United States Circuit Court they are a preferred obligation over all mortgage claims, like wages.

The annual report of the American Beet Sugar Company explained the recent strength of the company's shares. The company's business was the greatest in its history and resulted in earnings applicable to dividends on the common stock equal to 10.9 per cent. This showing compares with 7.31 in 1910, 6.98 in 1909, 4.25 in 1908 and 1.01 in 1907. This year the company reports itself free from all debt. In earlier years a fairly heavy interest charge was reserved for this purpose.

Investment buying is going on in Pennsylvania in spite of the knowledge that it is not earning its dividend at the moment. It is said that the odd-lot absorption is more than ordinarily good. Some of the purchasing is said to be on the part of European investors, who know that its record and management are of the highest class. There is no danger that the dividend will be lowered.

There are reasons for believing that buying orders on a scale down are under the current prices for Reading. The next dividend meeting promises to develop new and interesting conditions as to the advisability of a higher dividend, which is favored by new interests. This does not seem to deter the bears from selling, however, and the short interest is on the increase.

There is a decided preference for the Morgan low-priced railway issues now, and apart from Erie, Southern Railway is the most pronounced favorite. There is some talk of putting Southern preferred on a dividend basis again, as about 12 per cent is being earned for the stock.

MOTHER ENDS LIFE AFTER CHILD'S DEATH

EAST PROVIDENCE, May 11.—Driven into insanity through grief over the death of her child, Mrs. Effie Haney, twenty-eight, of Duluth, Minn., committed suicide by taking carbolic acid at the home of her mother here. Mrs. Haney was so grief-stricken when her child died a short time ago that her mother brought her East. Her melancholy increased, however, and her mind became so deranged that she attacked her mother with a knife. A physician found that she was insane and arrangements were made to place her in some institution.

KELLEY MOTOR BRANCH HERE

By J. C. KERRISON.

Another truck company to establish what is considered its own branch in the city of Boston is the Kelley Motor Truck Company, manufacturers of the Kelley truck, heretofore known as the Frayer-Miller.

The branch will be known as the Eastern Motor Company and is located in the front end of the Shoe and Leather Building on Ames street, Cambridge.

E. S. Kelley, of the Kelley Motor Truck Company, with P. S. Aultman, of the factory, arrived in Boston a few days ago, and after a thorough inspection of the conditions existing here, secured headquarters.

Mr. Kelley returned to the factory yesterday fully satisfied with the way affairs have progressed, while Mr. Aultman remains as the head of the local company. Mr Aultman, while somewhat of a stranger to Boston, is one of the best posted truck men in the country, having for years been identified with the motor truck industry and having studied it from every angle.

Mr. Aultman, as the general manager of the Eastern Motor Company, will take over the affairs of the Frayer-Miller, which heretofore have been in the hands of the D. P. Nichols Company. It is Mr. Aultman's intentions not only to establish and maintain a sales department for the Frayer-Miller, but likewise to establish a service depot that will be second to none and fully in keeping with the wants of Frayer-Miller owners throughout New England.

The Frayer-Miller, or rather the Kelley truck, as it is now called, it will be remembered, won three of the prizes offered by the Boston AMERICAN in its economy and reliability motor truck run of last October, making a most creditable and exceptionally good record.

The Frayer-Miller is shown in two, three and five ton trucks and is of the air-cooled type.

General Manager Aultman will shortly make known his executive staff.

No. 130

Why an Advertising Campaign for Umbrellas Failed, And Why One Succeeded.

Umbrellas go back to a remote past in the history of China. In fact, a Chinese gentleman is hardly conceivable without an umbrella. It is not known who introduced the umbrella into Europe from China, but their introduction was followed by an immediate vogue. Today the American who goes without an umbrella on a rainy day is a rare man and the American who can name a trade-marked umbrella is still a rarer individual.

Until a short time ago umbrellas were never advertised. Then a firm started to advertise a particular umbrella with certain distinctive features. It got the inquiries and got a good business at the start, but, strange to say, there were few repeat orders. The trouble was that in the manufacture of that particular line of umbrellas a silk was used which was a good protection when first exposed to rain but which the rain soon percolated through and then was little better than nothing. The firm, naturally enough, concluded that advertising didn't pay.

Another firm saw its opportunity, took up the advertising with an absolutely good article and today that firm is doing thousands of dollars' worth of business where before it did hundreds.

It's just as easy to advertise an umbrella as it is to advertise any staple. In fact, a well made umbrella with some distinctive feature is something that every one requires and the market is still open to other makers of good umbrellas to do the same thing as one or two successful manufacturers are now doing—make their umbrellas known so that people will ask for them under a distinctive trade mark.

Newspaper advertising reaches the busy man and the busy woman, and is the best form of advertising for an umbrella manufacturer. It's the advertising that talks to a man whenever he takes up his favorite paper and it's the advertising which also reaches the jobber and the retailer most effectively.

In the New England field the paper which goes into the most homes is the Boston American, that is, the homes of all classes. It is bought in the exclusive sections as well as in the less exclusive centres. The best evidence of its popularity as a newspaper is the fact that it has almost 400,000 daily circulation. Think what it means to lay a statement of the desirability of your goods before its readers.

If you would like to have further information about this, address Trade Aid Department, Boston American.

Congress Should Investigate the Post Office Department

Commonly investigations are to be avoided. Conceived in partisanship, they too often have behind them a party rather than a public purpose. Now and then, however, an inquiry into some department is invited by facts not to be denied nor stilled into silence. In such case action should be swift, thorough and sure.

This the AMERICAN believes is the situation in the Post Office Department. If half be true that is told, a committee of both houses of Congress should look into its affairs.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL HITCHCOCK IS NOT ONLY POSTMASTER-GENERAL, BUT A MANAGING POLITICAN. In the latter role, more than any other, he is in charge of the national Republican machine. It is charged that Mr. Hitchcock, on more than one questionable occasion, has sought to make one hand wash the other, as Postmaster-General punish folk who offended against him as party manager.

There are two ways in which the Post Office Department might advance a party interest. The Postmaster-General might reward as he might punish. The latter perversion of official authority is worse than the former. Mr. Hitchcock is said to have been guilty of both.

When the Post Office Department sought a law advancing postal rates on magazines it was something more than mere gossip that the motive was to punish the popular magazines for criticising the Administration, or to stifle such criticism by holding over all magazines a threat—like some suspended sword of Damocles. IF THAT WERE THE MOTIVE, INVESTIGATION SHOULD DISCOVER IT AND MR. HITCHCOCK BE IMPEACHED.

The publishers and editors of our great magazines—names can be given—declare that while in Washington, laying before Congress their opposition and the reasons of it, to the Hitchcock programme, they were everywhere "shadowed" by departmental sleuths. They assert that their mails were plundered, their letters opened. IF THIS BE TRUE, OR ANY PART OF IT BE TRUE, INVESTIGATION SHOULD SHOW IT AND SOME ONE BE IMPEACHED. Such methods would disgrace a tyranny, heap infamy upon a despotism. To countenance them would be to stamp as failures both Yorktown and Bunker Hill. In that case we might better have remained an English province, since England would not support such scoundrelisms.

What follows came to the Post Office surface about a fortnight ago.

Mr. Myrick publishes an agricultural magazine. Last November it spoke harshly of the Administration and advised its readers to repudiate it. Mr. Myrick, through his weekly, urged the farmers to help elect a Democratic Congress.

Immediately thereafter, Mr. Hitchcock's agents began poking about, in person and by letters, among Mr. Myrick's subscribers. Mr. Hitchcock's agents wound up their pryings and peerings, their pokings and sleuthings by reporting that Mr. Myrick's farm weekly was not a magazine, but a mere advertising vehicle. They recommended that it be refused place in the mails as second class mail matter. It should be accepted—they said—only as first class matter and pay first class rates.

The Post Office Department, Mr. Hitchcock in command, was about to proceed in accordance with these findings and recommendations, when Mr. Myrick demanded a hearing. The hearing before Third Assistant Postmaster-General Britt was held on April 15.

Mr. Myrick was present and sworn. He said that his magazine was seventy-five years old. If the magazine were first class and not second class matter, why had the Post Office authorities been so long blind and deaf and dumb to that important truth? asked Mr. Myrick.

On the question of his magazine being not a magazine, but a mere advertising medium, Mr. Myrick has this to say: His magazine devoted 40 per cent. of its space to advertising. Other magazines, tamer and more tepid politically, with which Mr. Hitchcock found no fault, gave up to advertising as much as full 70 per cent. Why make fish of him and flesh of the others? asked Mr. Myrick.

The difference between first class and second class mail matter, Mr. Myrick explained, would be in his agricultural case a deadly difference. THAT POSTAL DIFFERENCE WOULD FIGURE INTO A TOTAL OF $18,000 A WEEK. TO EXACT IT WAS TO KILL HIS PUBLICATION—to annihilate it. Was it the Post Office purpose, Mr. Hitchcock at the head, to destroy Mr. Myrick's property? His magazine was worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. Was it to be struck down at one Post Office blow?

If so, why? asked Mr. Myrick.

It was here the unexpected came to pass. Ten Senators—no one knew why—had decided to be present at the hearing. At the query, Why has the Post Office Department taken the trail of Mr. Myrick's farm magazine? Senator Stone became inquisitive.

"Is it not a fact," asked Senator Stone of Mr. Myrick, "that you issued an extra edition on November 1, which advised your million subscribers to vote the Democratic ticket? The edition was called the 'New Taft Tax in a New Form.' And isn't it a fact that you believed that in certain sections of the country this edition had the effect of returning Democratic Congressmen to seats that had been filled for years by Republicans?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Myrick.

"This Post Office investigation into your affairs was started shortly after that extra edition, was it not?"

Mr. Myrick replied in the affirmative.

"Do you think that the extra edition was the real cause that started the Post Office Department on your trail?"

"I would rather not answer that question," said Mr. Myrick.

AND THE CAT WAS OUT OF THE BAG.

Senator Lodge turned upon Assistant Postmaster-General Britt. Said Senator Lodge:

"What right has the Post Office Department to go prying into a man's affairs of this kind? Can you quote the statute from which they derive the authority?"

"It is a matter of postal regulations, and I do not know that it is founded on any statute," replied Mr. Britt.

At this Senator Gore broke in with: "Has this department reestablished the ancient Inquisition? I had no idea that the inspectors were used as they have been in this case. One would think this man a criminal instead of the editor of a magazine."

Mr. Britt, acting for Mr. Hitchcock and the Post Office Department, "reserved his decision." Congress, however, should not reserve its action. It should light the torch of inquiry and go into Post Office Department methods. If somebody is using the department as a party club, that somebody should be impeached. ALSO, THE POWER TO SAY WHAT IS AND WHAT IS NOT SECOND CLASS MAIL MATTER SHOULD BE TAKEN FROM THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL AND GIVEN TO THE COURTS.

ETERNITY

BY WILLIAM STEVENS

Enshrouded in the wilderness of Age,
The Sea and all the Land lay dead.
The world, a lifeless barren clod, had lived
Its cycle of Eternal Life; and now,
All silent on its round, the Unseen Hand
Of Law decreed for Earth Eternal Sleep!
The sleep from which Life springs eternally.
So 'tis to wake—God's fecund Dreams fulfilled!
Reborn, to love, to laugh the silence through.
Life stirs the voiceless ether, lights once more
Some starless path, revives the fires of Dawn—
That long-belated Day again may smile.

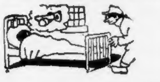
Seizing Opportunity

A Story with Two Tails

By WEX JONES

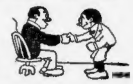
MAGINNIS was an office boy who wanted to get on,
Ready to grab at any chance before the chance was gone.
He often read in worthy books that boys should not be pert,
But astonish all their bosses by the way they kept alert.
So Maginnis always had the air of a setter spotting quail
Or a jockey watching for a chance to slip through on the rail,
And he often startled old McCall, when the office bell would jangle,
By the way he'd carom off the desk at almost any angle.

But Opportunity was slow; she never seemed to come
To that particular office where Maginnis made things hum.
Running out for one-cent stamps, or, telephone to ear,
Saying "Boss is out!" is irksome toil for a budding financier,
But at last one day near three o'clock, when his optimism sank,
McCall said, "Take this million to the Merchandisers' Bank";
And as Maginnis clutched the roll his youthful heart was leaping
To think of what a chance he had with that million in his keeping.



THIS ENDING FOR PESSIMISTS:

The boy had read somewhere, it seemed, that the Merchandisers' Bank
Was caught in a financial pool where stronger outfits sank,
"And so," he said, "I'll run straight home and hide to-night the cash,
And the boss won't lose a Lincoln penny when the tottering bank goes smash."
Alas, that night a burglar came and robbed poor young Maginnis,
And while the bank is running yet, it was the youngster's finis.



THIS ENDING FOR OPTIMISTS:

The boy had read somewhere, it seems, that the Merchandisers' Bank
Was caught in a financial pool, where stronger outfits sank,
And so he took the money home, and next day brought it back,
And before the trembling, pale McCall he emptied out the sack.
"You've saved the firm; that bank has bust; oh, show me where your fin is,"
Exclaimed the boss, as he shook hands with his partner, young Maginnis.

The Commuters' Bookshelf

First Aid in Nursery Ailments.

THIS little volume is intended for the wife of the commuter who mows his own lawn. The wife looks after the children instead of leaving them to a nurse. Any mother who masters these few simple rules is ready to bring up a large family without paying most of her husband's income over to a physician, who, nine times out of ten, will merely poke the infant with his finger and say: "Call me up to-morrow afternoon if he isn't better. Ten dollars, please."

Should a distinct tick-tick be heard when the child is around, pick him up and place your ear against his body. If the ticking is now even more clearly audible, the child has swallowed a time-piece. Place him on a sofa and listen carefully for twelve hours. If during that time you hear the sudden whirring of a bell, the child has swallowed the alarm clock, but refuse to be alarmed. The youngster will soon digest it, and you can buy a new one for seventy-five cents. If you do not hear the alarm, the child has evidently eaten your gold watch, and you should make him swallow a fish hook, with which you can angle for your property.

If the child is in another room and has not made its presence known by the sound of breaking glass or china for more than two minutes, he has found the box of candy you had hidden on the piano and is eating the contents, two at a time. Remedy: Hurry in and eat them yourself.

Should you hear a loud thumping, evidently caused by a body falling down stairs, wait quietly until the lowest step has been reached. Then if you hear strong language you know that it was only your husband who fell and you can go on reading how Robert W. Chambers's latest heroine carries off a blushing husband in the brave new-fashioned way. If there is a moment of silence, however, you must rush out and give the child a piece of cake before he begins to cry.

General Hints for Commuters.

There is not sufficient space here to give more than a few random extracts from this valuable and exhaustive treatise.

One of the most useful things in it is the classified breakfast dishes. Here the commuter who must hurry for his train sees at a glance—

Buckwheat cakes	1 block.
Buckwheat cakes (with syrup)	2 blocks.
Fried eggs (3)	2 blocks.
Boiled (2), soft	3 blocks.

This shows him that he is handicapped two blocks if he stops to eat buckwheat cakes and maple (or other) syrup. A simple way of knowing how much one can eat
